

"Since I can remember, I think of Alentejo as the most peaceful place in my country. On the rolling plains of this land, thousands of cork oak trees open their branches to the sky and, in a powerful reunion, conceive an impressive scenario where time seems to stop." Joana Santos Barbosa. The Alentejo side table is a glimpse over the South of Portugal, where thousands of cork oaks raise their canopies to the sky. Choosing one of the four tops available, we approach the different seasons: Spring in a dark green lacquered, Summer in a sunburned tone of walnut marquetry, Autumn in an empty space of acrylic and Winter in the white hues of Estremoz marble. The slender base in cast brass with patinated effect is the result of careful sculpted work that highlights the natural details.
