Methodology for Determining the Price of Crypto-Assets

The Company obtains pricing and liquidity from approved liquidity providers and liquidity venues. The relevant pricing source is selected based on the crypto-asset, currency pair and available liquidity. The Company does not independently set market prices for crypto-assets. The exchange rates presented to Customers are derived from external market data and pricing obtained from the relevant liquidity source.

Pricing Sources for Crypto-Assets

The following primary pricing sources are currently used:

Crypto-Asset	Primary Pricing Source
Bitcoin (BTC)	Kraken
Ethereum (ETH)	Kraken
Binance Coin (BNB)	Kraken
USD Coin (USDC)	Zodia Markets
Litecoin (LTC)	Kraken
Solana (SOL)	Kraken
EURC	Zodia Markets

The Company may amend, replace or supplement the pricing sources used from time to time based on liquidity availability, execution quality, operational requirements, regulatory requirements and market conditions. Such changes will not affect a Transaction once a quote has been accepted by the Customer.

Fiat Currency Exchange Rates

Where a Transaction involves fiat currency conversion, foreign exchange rates are sourced from approved foreign exchange providers, including eKantor and other available liquidity sources.

Price Formation

The exchange rate presented to the Customer is derived from the relevant pricing source identified above.

Company Service Fees, Payment Method Fees and any other applicable charges are disclosed separately in accordance with this Customer Pricing Information Document. Where applicable, such fees and charges are deducted from the Customer's payment amount before the purchase of crypto-assets is executed.

The amount remaining after deduction of applicable fees and charges is converted into the selected crypto-asset using the applicable market exchange rate sourced from the Company's liquidity providers.

Prior to the execution of a Transaction, the Company displays:

- the amount paid by the Customer;
- the applicable exchange rate;
- the applicable fees and charges; and
- the amount of crypto-assets to be received by the Customer.

This enables the Customer to review the Transaction terms, including the exchange rate, applicable fees and the final amount of crypto-assets to be received, before accepting and executing the Transaction.
