WINE & DRINKS · NOVEMBER 2026

A journey through Italy, one glass at a time

Italy is one of the oldest and largest wine producers in the world. Vines are grown in every one of its twenty regions, from the Alpine slopes of Valle d'Aosta and Alto Adige to the volcanic soils of Sicily, and the country is home to hundreds of native grape varieties found almost nowhere else, such as Nebbiolo, Sangiovese, Aglianico, Sagrantino, Nero di Troia, Verdicchio, Grillo and Ribolla Gialla.

Our list is a journey through these regions. Within each section, wines are listed from the lightest to the most full-bodied, each with its vintage, grape variety, appellation, producer and region, and a short description of its bouquet (aromas) and palate (taste).

All our wines are vegan. Wines by the glass are served in 150 ml pours; bottles are 750 ml.

Understanding the label

Italian wines are classified by law according to where they come from and how strictly they are produced. From the most to the least regulated:

DOCG Denominazione di Origine Controllata e Garantita
The highest level of Italian wine. Production area, grape varieties, yields and ageing are strictly regulated, and every wine is analysed and tasted by an official panel before release. The bottle carries a numbered government seal on the neck. Examples on our list: Chianti and Asolo Prosecco Superiore.

DOC Denominazione di Origine Controllata
Wines from a defined area, made following precise rules on grape varieties, yields and production methods that protect the traditional character of the place. Examples: Soave, Valpolicella, Barbera d'Alba, Collio, Sicilia.

IGT Indicazione Geografica Tipica
Wines from a wider geographical area, usually a region, with more flexible rules. This freedom lets producers use international grapes, blends or modern styles, and many excellent wines are labelled IGT by choice. Examples: Toscana IGT, Marche IGT.

DOP / IGP Denominazione di Origine Protetta / Indicazione Geografica Protetta
The European Union equivalents. DOP covers both DOCG and DOC wines, while IGP corresponds to IGT. Producers may use either the Italian or the European term on the label.

OTHER WORDS YOU WILL FIND

Classico
The historic heart of an appellation, e.g. Valpolicella Classico.

Superiore
A wine with stricter rules, often higher alcohol or longer ageing.

Millesimato
A sparkling wine made from grapes of a single vintage.

Brut / Extra dry / Dolce
For sparkling wines, from driest to sweetest: Brut is the driest, Extra dry is slightly softer and Dolce is sweet.

Organic
Wine made from certified organically grown grapes.
