Amber Rehman

LinkedIn: linkedin.com/in/amber-rehman

I am a program creator, public speaker, and facilitator specialising in anti-discrimination and mental health. With years of experience in advocacy, organisational leadership, and community strategy, I design and deliver initiatives that empower individuals and institutions to address hate, foster inclusion, and build equitable systems of care.

As the architect of the Active Bystander and Anti-Hate Training, and the Understanding and Responding to Hate, Racism, and Discrimination on the Front Lines training for Alberta's Nurses' Union, I have developed trauma-informed, culturally competent programs that equip participants with practical tools to intervene in hate incidents and support affected individuals.

I currently serve as Government Relations coordinator at Ruh, where I strengthen mental health programming that bridges faith and psychology. I volunteer with Action Dignity's Ethnocultural Council and the Research Action Team for the Calgary Alliance for the Common Good, contributing to community-based research and advocacy focused on equity and systemic change.

As the Western Canada Project Manager with Humaniti, I support humanitarian and mental health initiatives grounded in compassion and faith. My lived experience as an immigrant, a person with a disability, and a long-time community leader deeply informs my work, driving my commitment to build connected, empathetic, and empowered communities

Danish Wasim

LinkedIn: linkedin.com/in/danishwasim

Danish Wasim is an Edmonton-based finance and real estate professional with experience in investment strategy, financial planning, and land development. He currently serves as Director of Finance at the University of Alberta Properties Trust, where his responsibilities include financial reporting, budgeting, financing, and strengthening financial systems to support long-term development priorities.

Previously, Danish served as Chief Investment Officer at ProCura Real Estate Services. He holds an MBA in Finance and an undergraduate degree in Accounting.

As a Muslim and father of three, Danish values family, community, and responsible stewardship. He hopes to contribute his professional experience through board service, with a focus on financial accountability, thoughtful strategy, and long-term organizational sustainability.
