Leopard Hunting in Zimbabwe

Graceful, elusive, and incredibly powerful, the leopard (Panthera pardus) is the embodiment of the African night. As the fourth largest big cat after the tiger, lion, and jaguar, it commands both respect and admiration. Adult males weigh between 55 and 90 kilograms and reach a shoulder height of 70–80 cm, while the slimmer females weigh an average of 40–60 kilograms.

Zimbabwe is known for its healthy leopard population and offers some of the most exciting and rewarding leopard hunts on the continent.

The day begins long before sunrise. At daybreak, the hunting team prepares the dogs and sets off along the sandy roads in search of fresh tracks of a strong leopard. Once a promising trail is confirmed, the dogs are released—and the real adventure begins. Guided by GPS and their keen sense of hearing, the hunters follow the pack as they track the trail through rugged bushland and open terrain.

Expertly trained for this demanding task, the dogs work tirelessly until they locate the predator. Their excited barking breaks the morning silence, signaling that the leopard has been found. From now on, endurance and composure are required – the hunters must keep pace as the chase becomes more and more intense.Finally, the leopard may seek safety in a tree or on a rocky outcrop to escape the relentless dogs. This is the moment of truth: the hunter must place a calm and precise shot. If the leopard escapes, the chase begins anew – every moment filled with adrenaline and excitement. To increase the chances of success, carefully placed bait can also be used in selected areas.

The Hunting Area

This extraordinary hunting ground covers approx. 50,000 hectares of gently rolling wilderness— an impressive mosaic of open savannah, grassy bushland, and scattered miombo woodlands. The Shangani River meanders along the western border, providing both an important water source and a picturesque backdrop for the experience. Here, amidst the beauty of untouched Africa, every hunt becomes more than just a pursuit – it is an encounter with one of nature‘s greatest predators in its natural habitat.
