Connected Community Framework

Three Proven Strategies for Building a Connected Community

Through three proven strategies — Trusted Relationships, Connected Technology, and Shared Strategies — communities can build a strong, connected infrastructure that helps organizations work together, maximize resources, and create greater, lasting impact.

Trusted Relationships

Uniting Your Community's Caring Power

A Care Collaborative brings churches, nonprofits, and community partners together to build trust, strengthen relationships, and discover new ways to serve. Regular gatherings turn separate efforts into coordinated action, helping the whole community accomplish more together.

Connected Technology

Turning Connections Into Coordinated Action

A CharityTracker Care Network connects caregivers and organizations through one shared platform. It helps partners communicate, coordinate assistance, share resources, reduce duplication, and measure outcomes — so more people receive the right help at the right time.

Shared Strategies

Creating a Path From Surviving to Thriving

A Transformation Roadmap unites community partners around a powerful strategy to help people move beyond immediate needs toward lasting stability, greater independence, and a brighter future. Together, partners pursue shared goals, measure progress, and help transform lives.

Three Strategies. One Connected Community.

The real power comes when all three strategies work together.

- Trusted relationships bring people together.
- Connected technology helps them work together.
- Shared strategies give them a common direction.

The result: Communities move from working alone to working together — and from helping people get by to helping them get ahead.

Your Community Is Already Full of Possibility. Let's Connect It.
