TAKING ACTION FOR WILDLIFE

We have an impact on conservation through medicine specifically, and there's opportunity for us to have even a greater impact, to help as many wild animals as possible in addition to really practicing high-level, state-of-the-art, compassionate care for animals that live here at the Zoo.

DR. ALEX HERMAN, VICE PRESIDENT OF VETERINARY SERVICES

From the Board of Trustees

At the beginning of 2020, we were building on the success of the California Trail, increasing attendance to the Zoo, and adding conservation wins with condors and mountain lions. Then, shelter-in-place hit. The health of our guests, our residents, and the conservation and rescue animals we care for depends on a robust team. Like any great biome, our Zoo is a resilient, dynamic and diverse system, interdependent and strong.

2020 proved that life's interdependence on this planet is increasing and failure to take heed is catastrophic. COVID-19 forced every part of our organization to reflect on how we embody these truths now and in the future. From conservation to fundraising, from guest experience to animal care, respecting these connections has been our one constant. From the edges of the Budongo Forest to the corner of 106th and Malcolm Ave outside our gates, Oakland Zoo succeeds because we know none of us can reach our goals alone.

We immediately adapted procedures to maintain world-class animal care. We continued condor and mountain lion rescues, including media favorite Captain Cal and his adopted sisters. Conservation care leadership helped two endangered native species fight back through two projects, the vaccination of wild riparian brush rabbits and the release of 115 Foothill yellow-legged frogs. New arrivals joined us safely and continue to thrive, including Kijiji the giraffe, Aluna the baboon, and the next generation of our bison restoration project.

Education overcame shelter-in-place challenges to bring professionals and students together. Our staff kept guests safe and distanced while maintaining the Oakland Zoo experience, one of the nation's best. We said good-bye to plastic water bottles and other single-use plastics. Our community's overwhelming generosity and willingness to share our message allowed us to begin our financial recovery and increase the number of families who now call Oakland their zoo.

As we look forward into this new year and beyond, we bring with us the lessons of 2020. Thank you for all you have done to keep the vision and mission of our Zoo going during unprecedented times. We hope you and your loved ones are safe and healthy.

With gratitude,

COMMUNITY SUPPORT

You supported Oakland Zoo when we needed help the most

If we had any questions about the impact we are making for our community, they were answered by the outpouring of support from thousands of individuals concerned for the Zoo's well-being. In 2020 we received the largest number of donations in 98 years.

Whether you subscribed to Behind-the-Scenes Live, donated to our Animal Care or Pantry Campaigns, renewed your membership, donated to receive a bracelet from 6-year-old Andy Soulard, bid during our LollapaZoola fundraiser, or put your mask on and came out to spend a day with us at the Zoo when we could be open – YOU kept us afloat. You sustained us through this critical period and enabled us to continue our mission to connect people of all ages to the natural world. Thank you.

Caring for animals during the closing (and re-closing)

Caring for animals is a complex and daunting challenge, even in the best of times. With the onset of shelter-in-place orders, our Zoo teams had to quickly figure out how to continue care for all wildlife conservation rescues, including California condors with lead toxicity and mountain lions injured in wildfires, and maintain the geriatric, emergency, and wellness care provided at all times to the Zoo's now 850+ residents.

Because hospital care requires an essential medical team working closely together, we created separate but rotating Veterinary Hospital units to prevent the loss of the whole crew if a member got sick. This new rotation significantly reduced available veterinary medical providers on any given shift, but we proudly carried a full load of cases.

ANIMAL CARE & WELFARE

Since much of the Animal Care work happens outside and distanced, this team worked as a large unit meeting Zoo animals' daily needs. For indoor activities, such as caring for cold-sensitive species like our tropical fruit bats, team members ensured that optimal ventilation, sanitization, and masks were always in place.

Our most famous patient in 2020, Captain Cal, a mountain lion cub found by a Cal Fire firefighter in the Zogg Fire, offers a perfect example of the range of services the Zoo continued to provide during the pandemic. Captain Cal required daily anesthetic procedures, including three surgeries, complex bandage changes, nutrition and hydration, and treatment for pneumonia, anemia, and severe infection from the burns. The unexpected addition of two female cubs also orphaned by wildfire gave Cal a vital emotional and mental boost during this fraught time. Happily, Cal and his sisters (now named Goldie and Poppy in honor of their home state) now reside at the Columbus Zoo, healthy, connected, and cared for.

While COVID-19 is still a part of our everyday experience, the veterinary team has come back together, volunteers have begun to return, and the robust high standards of animal care at the Zoo continue into the new year.

I couldn't be more proud of how quickly our animal care and veterinary teams implemented workplace safety measures in order to ensure that all of the Zoo's animals are cared for through the pandemic. The health of our animals very clearly depends on the health of our staff.

COLLEEN KINZLEY, VICE PRESIDENT OF ANIMAL CARE, CONSERVATION, AND RESEARCH

Animal Care Arrivals

Bison calves

In May through June, while the rest of us were sheltering in place, seven bison calves decided to emerge. Part of the linnii Initiative established by the Blackfeet Nation, these bison will travel to Montana with their mothers early next year to help rebuild the once massive bison population in that area. Participation in the linnii Initiative represents the Zoo's ongoing commitment to preserving animals and ecosystems by healing communities. Two donors named a red dog (baby bison) this season. Their names are as different as our donors! Waahkiaap (Blackfoot for "back home") was chosen to honor the program and M. Bison is based on a video game character!

Baby baboon Aluna

Oakland Zoo's Hamadryas Baboon Troop continues to grow! In June, Mocha, who became a first-time mother last year to Mousa, gave birth to her second baby. Aluna joins a multigenerational family, making her the second member of Oakland's third generation!

Two male joeys, Maka and Jiembra

Two common wallaroo joeys surprised keepers this year. Born the size of a grain of rice, these two climbed up to their mothers' pouches, revealing themselves only by their movement inside the pouch and eventually taking a peek at the big wide world. These kids will ride around in that pouch to stay safe well after they can hop on their own.

ANIMAL CARE & WELFARE

Kijiji giraffe

Born in Kansas in 2018, Kijiji arrived in Oakland in April 2020 in a carrier specially designed for a young giraffe. Since her arrival, Kijiji has joined the giraffe habitat at her own pace, while Animal Care keep close tabs on her mood and health. Her natural curiosity has helped her fit in just fine. When Kijiji is older she will become a mother and continue to build the Oakland giraffe family.

Jaidee wreathed hornbill

Jaidee might not look like a chick, but he is! Wreathed hornbills have a unique way of nesting that protects mother and baby until the chick has grown the feathers it needs for flight. Jaidee will find a new home at another Association of Zoos & Aquariums-accredited (AZA) facility to help Malaysian wreathed hornbill populations grow. Pair-bonded, Mom and Dad will stay in Oakland and reuse Jaidee's nest box next year.

ENDING ILLEGAL WILDLIFE TRADE

Working with local and global partners to end planet-damaging trade

Oakland Zoo joins the AZA in taking a clear stand against the illegal wildlife trade. The demand for illegal wildlife--for food, for pets, and medicine--has driven many species to the brink of extinction. Markets where sick animals live in crowded conditions create an opportunity for species-specific diseases to spread into new hosts. COVID-19 may have spread to humans from such a market. Through informing our local community, caring for animals taken by authorities, and supporting conservation organizations in the field financially, Oakland Zoo continues to fight against the illegal wildlife trade.

SAY NO TO THE EXOTIC PET INDUSTRY

Illegally transported animals from all over the world enter the United States throughout the year. As a local leader, Oakland Zoo can drive attention to this global problem within our community. We have integrated anti-poaching messaging throughout the Zoo and created outreach programs to spread the word beyond the Zoo's boundaries.

Our Animal Care and Veterinary Hospital work with local authorities to heal confiscated animals and to find the best forever home for each animal's circumstance. The animals are released to the wild, to a new home within our zoo community or at a high-quality animal conservation facility.

By purchasing artwork from communities living near wild spaces, the Zoo's gift shop supports animal-friendly commerce, decreasing the need for illegal trade as a source of income.

We provide grants and capacity building to support the work of local conservationists who are on the ground every day fighting to recover, heal, and return the wild animals that have been stolen from their habitats. Organizations like ARCAS in Guatemala fight to preserve the heritage of their wild spaces. Big Life in Kenya employs hundreds of local Maasai rangers, and maintains a network of field stations to protect East African areas that majestic elephants and other wild animals call home.

The demand for wild animals as pets, exotic food, or medicine is ethically wrong, ecologically destructive, a serious threat to wildlife populations, and a main cause of zoonotic disease. The global pandemic we are now experiencing informs us that embracing a nature-connected mindset is critical for all inhabitants of our planet, and the only way forward.

Teaming Up to Save Native Species – Foothill Yellow-Legged Frog

Even when closed to the public, our conservation work continues!

This year, despite the pandemic's challenges, Oakland Zoo advanced conservation medicine in two vital projects to protect two native species, California riparian brush rabbits and Foothill yellow-legged frogs.

Foothill yellow-legged frogs are listed as threatened in the California Endangered Species Act. While petitions are being filed to add federal protection, we continue our work Taking Action for Wildlife with our conservation partners, U.S Fish and Wildlife Services, U.S Forest Service, and California Department of Fish and Wildlife, to prepare a release into the wild. Oakland Zoo's Biodiversity Lab provided continuous care for a year to raise these little ones and prepare them for a safe launch into their native habitat.

Building on Oakland Zoo's previous success raising and releasing endangered Mountain yellow-legged frogs, we returned 115 Foothill yellow-legged frogs to Plumas National Forest in Cresta last June, marking the first-ever release of these endangered frogs into the wild.

While we are proud of our work, we know more can be done to protect this population. Building on this year's advances, we are developing a husbandry manual so other organizations can participate in the study and care of these frogs into the future.

Pushing Conservation Medicine Forward

Protecting fragile native rabbit populations

The riparian or Californian brush rabbit faces possible extinction from a virus originating in Europe, the Rabbit Hemorrhagic Disease Virus (RHDV2). These cottontail rabbits are a critical part of the ecosystems they inhabit as both herbivores that manage the plant life and as sources of food for predators.

Our vaccination project began with 21 rabbits captured from the San Joaquin River National Wildlife Refuge near Modesto. These remarkable rabbits underwent 82 procedures at the Oakland Zoo Veterinary Hospital, from full physical exams to treatment for wildlife diseases, to ensure the rabbits were otherwise healthy. After these procedures, a small group of the rabbits received the vaccination. While domestic rabbits have been vaccinated successfully, this was a first for a wild population and, due to the fragility of the population as a whole, staff vigilantly observed responses to the vaccine, searching for any sign of complication. None emerged.

To date, working with our partners, 200 rabbits and counting have been successfully vaccinated. Data collected in post-vaccination lab tests are being assessed by California Fish and Wildlife to help other threatened wild-rabbit populations. We are proud that our work here at the Oakland Zoo Veterinary Hospital may have provided a Noah's Ark for this beautiful, complex little California rabbit species and for California rabbits in general.

UGANDA: AN ECO-TRIP WITH IMPACT

Partners in the solution

In November 2019, VP of Conservation, Amy Gotliffe, and 16 “delegates” embarked on a good-will Eco-Expedition to deepen connections between Oakland Zoo and four of our Africa-based conservation partners.

Travelers on this trip sought to make a difference. They attended workshops on conservation, culture, and wildlife-friendly shopping. They carried donated supplies from the entire Zoo Community to our hard-working field partners, from microscopes to raingear, books to backpacks, and even a dart gun for our chimpanzee vets.

A chimpanzee is shown in a natural forest setting, sitting on the ground and eating a piece of fruit. The chimpanzee is surrounded by lush green vegetation and a large, moss-covered tree trunk. The text "CONSERVATION IN ACTION" is overlaid in the top right corner of the image.

CONSERVATION IN ACTION

Focus on chimpanzees

The Budongo Forest Reserve, home to 3,000 chimpanzees, is one of six protected areas in Uganda, though illegal hunting still threatens wildlife. Wire snares, set for duiker or pig, often catch chimpanzees, resulting in nearly 25% suffering injury or infection.

Former poachers who commit to quit trapping have a viable alternative in the Goat Program, which includes goats, training on their care, and ongoing veterinary treatments led by the award-winning Dr. Caroline Asimwe. During the visit to the community, our team assisted Dr. Caroline in deworming over 400 goats in a single day!

Focus on young people and women

Conserving wildlife depends on young people's connection to the natural world. We participated in a BSRP local school training on living with chimpanzees, using materials funded by Oakland Zoo. We brought needed supplies to the Kibale Fuel Wood Project's (KFWP) five science centers, helping young leaders promote a shared habitat for all.

The KFWP is another long-time partner of Oakland Zoo and an exemplary organization working to end deforestation. Delegates got their hands dirty helping to plant trees, build fuel-efficient stoves, and make eco-charcoal out of sustainable materials that decrease the demand for wood from the forest. We joined in KFWP's Competition Days, day-long festivities and contests to celebrate nature and chimpanzees and the communities that work together to support them.

The Community Action Project (CAP) offers a sustainable livelihood for women near the Kibale Forest. Delegates met artists creating colorful handcrafted beads made from recyclable materials and got to buy directly. The Oakland Zoo purchases CAP beads and sells them as part of the Beads for Chimps program.

Focus on lions

Lions in Queen Elizabeth Park, losing prey to invasive species, hunt domestic cattle or goats, devastating families, who sometimes retaliate by poisoning lions. The Uganda Carnivore Project addresses these conflicts through education, research, lion-monitoring, fortified livestock enclosures, and mediation. Delegates also spent time with the Lion Recovery Fund, learning how organizations work together to protect these beautiful cats.

BRING THE ZOO HOME

In March, closure pushed us to consider how we could continue serving as an active community resource during this critical time. We needed new ways of connecting with people of all ages that were both unique and meaningful.

Here are some of the exciting programs we launched this year, available to students and lifelong learners worldwide and close to home.

Behind-the-Scenes Live

This subscription-based service featured a daily 20-minute interactive live program highlighting animals, keepers, and viewers' questions. Our final broadcast aired on June 10, and all 49 episodes are now available on our website free of charge.

Cocktails & Conservation

This monthly virtual happy hour combines a meet and greet with some of the world's most incredible conservationists with a fun cocktail-making tutorial by a local restaurant or bar. From Madagascar, Guatemala, Panama, and beyond, we learned how conservation heroes work on the ground every day to save endangered species and their habitats. New dates coming for 2021!

Virtual ZooCamp

While we had to cancel in-person ZooCamp this summer, we remained committed to our campers and to authentic wildlife interaction. This June, we piloted a free, week-long virtual camp adventure.

OAKLAND ZOO'S DIGITAL REVOLUTION

LollapaZoola

After we canceled Walk in the Wild and closure continued into the summer, we decided to host LollapaZoola, our first virtual fundraiser. An anonymous donor challenged us to match a $500,000 donation. With Warriors hypeman Franco Finn, our animals, the bands Dirty Cello and Steel Jam, we hosted a program from the Zoo that engaged 2000 viewers and raised $506,850!

Virtual Animal Meet and Greet

Perfect for a special day! Groups can join a Zoom call with one of our educators and two “Zoo ambassador” animals, such as a hedgehog or chuckwalla. Guests learn about the biology and conservation of these ambassadors. Got a question? Ask away!

ZooSchool

Shifting all of our on-site programming onto a virtual platform expanded our reach beyond our beloved Bay Area. While most classes that participate in Virtual ZooSchool – an educational life science-based lesson featuring Zoo animals – are from local school districts, last year we connected with classes as far away as New York and Missouri!

Virtual Field Trips for K-12 Classes

While Bay Area schools have transitioned to distance learning, teachers can still take their classes on a virtual field trip to the Zoo! Students explore life science and wildlife conservation concepts with our expert educators.

Standing Up to Plastics

The Zoo moves to end single-use plastics

Each year, 300 million pounds of plastics are created, and only 10% of that is recycled. The rest floods our environment. Taking a stand against plastics pollution, the Oakland Zoo, the first Zoo in our state to proactively do so, took action with a “No-to-Plastic” pledge in February.

Plastics have damaged our oceans, forests and other wild spaces as well as entering the human food chain. Some studies suggest that the average American eats about a credit card a week worth of plastic in the form of microplastics.

The Oakland Zoo began our pledge with an audit of the organization’s plastic use, specifically, single-use plastics. The audit included guest areas, administrative areas, the hospital and beyond. Beverage bottles alone represented over 10,000 single-use plastic containers sold each year.

Vendors worked with the Zoo to reimagine packaging, creating alternatives to the old plastic options. The result? New aluminum cans for water, the replacement of plastic-window envelopes for those made of plant-based materials, sustainable bamboo silverware in our cafes, and the adoption of compostable plastic bags and gloves throughout the Zoo.

To spread the word, we sponsored and displayed the larger-than-life “Washed Ashore” exhibit by artist Angela Pozzi. This work, three enormous sculptures made of plastic debris found along shorelines, invites visitors to consider the wild world we want to leave for generations to come.

Challenges and Opportunities in Education

Oakland Zoo's programs grow the next generation of conservationists

In 2020, Oakland Unified School District released its strategic plan for the next three years, with one of its top priorities being increasing meaningful internship opportunities for all students. Oakland Zoo continues to answer that call with our collaboration with PG&E. The Zoo's conservation internship program supports underserved students in making the professional and educational connections that might not normally be available to them, to launch a successful career in conservation.

Originally conceived as a local program, the move to distributed online learning meant the program could extend its reach across the state and the country. Students participated from as far south as Los Angeles and from out of state as well, further growing the conservation community of our local Oakland students. As we look forward to next year, we reflect on the unexpected successes of this new way of learning and will incorporate those aspects that can help us improve the program when we return to face-to-face in the near future.

To grow the internship program and to continue to extend opportunities to all of our local students, Oakland Zoo has begun a collaboration with teachers at Title 1 schools in Oakland Unified School District to co-design a Climate and Conservation Literacy Curriculum rooted in the glorious California Trail. This co-design process brings together the best of the Zoo's leadership in conservation and Oakland teachers' unique perspective on local students' needs. Together, these programs push the boundaries of what's possible in conservation and for our students.

A Letter from Our Executive Vice President

When Oakland Zoo closed its gates in March due to the pandemic, we were filled with trepidation. We have traditionally relied primarily on admissions-related revenue to operate Oakland Zoo and drive our conservation work locally and globally.

As the closure continued from weeks into months, our Board and Management team made difficult decisions to reduce monthly expenses. We had to say goodbye to some of our team and have yet to fully restaff following our reopening in late July. What we did not sacrifice was our life-sustaining animal care operations. Over 750+ animals rely on us each and every day, whether or not the Zoo is open. Even with drastic budget cuts, Oakland Zoo still spent more than $1 million monthly to maintain our high standards of animal care and essential operations during the four-month closure.

Over the spring, we were incredibly fortunate to receive Payroll Protection Funds with the support of our partner Fremont Bank, which you will see reflected in our Government Funding line item. This went a long way in sustaining our ongoing payroll and facilities expenses.

Throughout our closure the overwhelming support from the community truly kept our spirits up. Donors, members, docents and volunteers, neighbors, guests and new friends from around the world sent us masks, letters and emails of support, donations of money and items. Six-year-old Andy Soulard ignited a global fundraiser for Oakland Zoo on Facebook! In all, Oakland Zoo received roughly 13,000 donations last fiscal year. You will see this generosity reflected in the Contributions line item.

The support from our community not only sustained us through one of the most significant financial crises in our almost 100-year history, it enabled us to rebuild operating reserves that continue to support us through the slow winter months and a second pandemic-related closure. It has also enabled us to continue investing in life- and species-saving conservation work.

While the last year has been challenging to say the least, I am so grateful for our community. Because of you, we are looking forward to the next year of impact and to celebrating our centennial in 2022!

Sincerely,
