Cultivating Seeds of New Life in Africa

The wind of change is blowing among African Quakers in the FUM community as churches expand and grow in new places, and as African Friends respond to Christ’s Great Commission.

The Friends Africa Board of Missions, established by FUM, is turning the tide as Kenyan Quakers are cultivating seeds of new life in Africa. We are witnessing growing support and interest among African Friends for mission work in Tanzania, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Uganda, and other places in Kenya. This is changing FUM’s approach to missions. No longer should we think of missions as a Western initiative. FUM is working to empower African Quaker churches to see themselves as senders and sowers, missionaries and generous givers, in support of missions. The empowerment of the African Quaker church for missions is vital as we make this paradigm shift.

“For as rain and snow fall from heaven and return not again, but water the earth, bringing forth life and giving growth,” (Isaiah 55:10), so African members of the FUM community are being called to cast seeds of new life across Africa.
