CARE

Travertine is a natural stone material, which means that every slab varies in terms of vein pattern and color. Travertine has an open surface, which means that if water is left on the surface for a period, it can leave marks. Therefore, we recommend using coasters for items that can leave marks and stains.

Extended exposure to the outdoors can lead to color changes and staining. During the winter season, we advise covering the tables with a waterproof cover or storing them indoors.

Made from travertine, the Soho table features a column and a tabletop designed to contrast with each other. The tabletop, thin and light, stands in stark contrast to the column's robust and fluted base. As a natural stone with a surface of tiny voids and imperfections, each slab differs in vein pattern and color, creating distinct variations for each table.

The surface of the table is treated with a Nano coating to resist light spills, ensuring practicality without compromising aesthetics, as the surface maintains its matte finish. Meanwhile, the raw and untreated column showcases the purity of the material, embracing the beauty found in its natural appearance.
