Market Review

- Most global sovereign yields moved higher as the renewed oil shock revived inflation concerns and led markets to scale back expectations for policy easing. The US Treasury yield curve bear-steepened, with the long end underperforming as investors repriced the US Federal Reserve path and demanded greater compensation for inflation uncertainty, fiscal deficits, and heavy government borrowing. In Europe, yields also rose. German bunds were pressured by the oil driven inflation repricing and the prospect of heavier issuance, while gilts faced the additional drag of UK fiscal policy uncertainty.
- Most fixed income sectors underperformed on an excess return basis as credit spreads widened.
- High-yield bonds generated negative total returns; performance by quality was mixed, with B-rated bonds posting the strongest returns, followed by BB and CCC rated bonds, respectively. Bank loans, unlike high yield, generated positive returns for the month due to their floating-rate nature, with B-rated loans posting the strongest returns, followed by BB and CCC rated loans, respectively. Emerging markets (EM) external debt generated negative returns – spread widening and an increase in US Treasury yields weighed on results.
- The US Federal Reserve and most other major central banks left policy rates unchanged, with the exception of the Reserve Bank of New Zealand, which hiked by 25 basis points.

Underlying Fund Performance and Attribution

- The Underlying Fund generated a negative return during the month of July.
- The Underlying Fund's allocation to EM debt was relatively neutral for performance overall. EM corporate debt exposure aided results, led by high yield issuers across industrials and financial institutions. This positive performance was partially offset by weakness in EM sovereign debt.
- Positioning within global high yield detracted modestly from the Underlying Fund's results, driven primarily by weakness among industrial issuers across materials, consumer durables, and consumer services sectors, while financial institutions provided a partial offset. An allocation to bank loans benefited results, supported by industrial and financial issuers and the sector's floating rate characteristics. Convertible bond exposure detracted from performance, particularly within pharmaceutical sciences and software services sectors.
- Developed government positioning was the largest detractor from the Underlying Fund's performance, in aggregate. US Treasury exposures, including cash bonds and related derivatives, detracted as longer term yields rose during July. An allocation to Treasury Inflation-Protected Securities (TIPS) also detracted slightly, while non-US developed government positioning benefited results.
- Within securitised sectors, allocations to non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities (RMBS), commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS), and asset backed securities (ABS) contributed positively to the Underlying Fund's performance. Agency mortgage-backed securities (MBS) passthroughs detracted from results as an increase in interest rate volatility weighed on the sector.

Underlying Fund Positioning and Outlook

- Economic growth remains above trend, supported by accommodative financial conditions and a historic AI-driven capex cycle. Headline GDP growth may understate underlying strength as surging AI-related imports weigh on net exports. Growth is likely to moderate towards trend as fiscal impulse fades, monetary policy remains restrictive, and household balance sheets are showing signs of being strained. Inflation remains above target, while services inflation and AI-related demand may contribute to an uneven path back to price stability. The Wellington Management team believes EM country fundamentals are well supported by manageable balance of payment positions, improving fiscal deficits, and supportive commodity prices. Sovereign hard currency spreads appear somewhat tight and therefore EM exposure to high conviction turnaround stories has been limited. The Wellington Management team allocates to EM corporate issuers with prudent balance sheet management in select sectors and targets the most attractive opportunities in below-investment-grade issuers.*
- Within structured finance, the Wellington Management team believes consumer fundamentals remain supportive overall although deteriorating for the lower income cohort, and gradual labour market deterioration is anticipated. Seasoned residential mortgages are favoured and the team remains opportunistic in buying dislocated commercial mortgages and collateralised loan obligations.

* "Investment-grade" credit assets are defined as those with a third-party credit rating of BBB- or higher, or loans extended to borrowers holding a third-party credit rating of BBB- or higher. Securities rated below investment-grade may have a significantly greater risk of default than investment-grade securities, and can be more volatile, less liquid, and involve higher transaction costs.

Investor Benefits

- Provides diversified credit exposure with daily liquidity, offering a liquid complement to private credit.
- Combines active top-down and bottom-up sector rotation to capture relative value opportunities with minimal market timing risk.
- A one-stop strategy combining professional asset allocation and tactical sector rotation for simplified implementation and oversight.
- The Underlying Fund targets a 7-8% yield* with strong potential for future returns, serving as a tactical replacement for passive equity.

* The Underlying Fund may not be successful in achieving its return objective.
