Executive Summary

President Donald Trump and his Administration refused to provide information sought by Congress in over 100 congressional investigations and inquiries. In doing so, they deployed dozens of approaches to impede congressional oversight, including:

- Refusing to comply with congressional requests for documents and witnesses;
- Refusing to comply with congressional subpoenas for documents and witnesses;
- Directing officials and private individuals not to provide information to Congress;
- Firing and demoting government officials who provided information to Congress;
- Producing irrelevant or redacted materials;
- Imposing unreasonable conditions on document reviews;
- Using nondisclosure agreements to block federal officials and private companies from providing information to Congress;
- Filing lawsuits to prevent third parties from complying with congressional subpoenas;
- Refusing to provide briefings for members and staff;
- Blocking access to federal facilities;
- Violating statutory obligations to disclose information to Congress; and
- Refusing to respond to requests from GAO.

These actions were often successful in frustrating congressional oversight. They also set new precedents that could be followed by subsequent presidential administrations. Among the Trump Administration's precedent-setting actions were (1) refusing to cooperate with an impeachment inquiry; (2) withholding documents based on protective claims of executive privilege; (3) directing officials not to participate in depositions unless House rules were amended to allow the presence of agency counsel; and (4) ignoring statutory obligations to provide information, such as tax returns, to Congress.

In the House's first impeachment inquiry, the Trump Administration refused to comply with any congressional requests and subpoenas for documentary and testimonial evidence. The White House, the Vice President, the Office of Management and Budget, the Department of State, the Department of Defense, and the Department of Energy failed to produce a single document in response to over 70 requests or demands for records from the House committees. Twelve top Administration officials refused to testify, including ten in defiance of subpoenas.

The Trump White House took a similar approach to at least 24 other congressional investigations, refusing to provide documents or witnesses in investigations into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential elections, President Trump's tax and financial records, allegations of improper security clearances provided to Trump family members, Hatch Act violations by senior White House officials, federal actions that benefited the Trump Organization, and other topics.

The refusal to provide information sought by Congress extended across the Trump Administration. At least 17 departments and agencies resisted congressional requests for information, including the Department of Justice, the Department of State, the Department of Treasury, the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Education, the Department of Interior, the Environmental Protection Administration, and the General Services Administration. In total, at least 74 investigations and inquiries were obstructed by these agencies.

With a few notable exceptions, Republican members of Congress endorsed President Trump's noncompliance with congressional oversight, reversing positions they asserted when a Democrat was president. These contrasting positions are addressed in a Co-Equal report¹ on investigative rules and practices followed during recent administrations.

Part I of this document summarizes the history of accommodation between the executive and legislative branches. Part II analyzes the tactics and justifications used by the Trump Administration to depart from this tradition of accommodation. It identifies over two dozen different ways the Trump White House and federal agencies impeded congressional investigations. The examples cited in part II are drawn from parts III and IV, which describe 104 investigations in which the Trump White House or federal agencies withheld information from Congress. These final two parts are organized by entity, with part III describing actions taken by the Trump White House and part IV covering the departments and agencies. Where the public record did not indicate the outcome of an investigation, current and former committee staff were contacted to ensure the accuracy of the description.

I. The History of Presidential Cooperation with Congressional Oversight

Prior to the Trump Administration, Congress and the executive branch regularly reached accommodations over congressional demands for information. In an early 1794 investigation, Congress requested and obtained² documents from the executive branch regarding a disastrous military expedition led by General St. Clair. President George Washington explained that he was guided by the principle that the executive branch should “communicate such papers as the public good would permit.”

President Ronald Reagan's 1982 instructions³ to agencies summarized the approach administrations have traditionally adopted as follows:

The policy of this Administration is to comply with Congressional requests for information to the fullest extent consistent with the constitutional and statutory obligations of the Executive Branch. ... [T]his tradition of accommodation should continue as the primary means of resolving conflicts between the Branches.

In the Supreme Court's 2020 decision in Trump v. Mazars,⁴ Chief Justice John Roberts wrote that prior to the Trump Administration, “congressional demands for the President's information have been resolved by the political branches without involving this Court,” explaining, “Historically, disputes over congressional demands for presidential documents have not ended up in court. Instead, they have been hashed out in the ‘hurly-burly, the give-and-take of the political process between the legislative and the executive.’”

Co-Equal’s guide to congressional oversight precedent⁵ documents that this traditional accommodation process resulted in many senior White House officials testifying before Congress. Since the Nixon Administration, at least nine White House Counsels,⁶ six National Security Advisors,⁷ five White House Chiefs of Staff,⁸ and 78 other White House officials⁹ have appeared before Congress.

Likewise, the accommodation process has resulted in production of a wide range of sensitive documents to Congress when Congress could demonstrate a sufficient need. As Co-Equal’s precedent reports document, the materials the executive branch produced to Congress¹⁰ have included internal communications involving the president, foreign dignitary communications with the president, internal communications involving top White House aides, communications between White House and cabinet officials, communications involving the Vice President’s Office, and communications involving the White House Counsel’s Office.

II. How the Trump Administration Responded to Congressional Oversight

During the four years of the Trump Administration, historical precedents were cast aside as President Trump and his top officials found novel ways to keep information from Congress. This part describes over two dozen different tactics and rationales used by the Trump Administration to withhold information from Congress, ranging from ignoring requests to defying subpoenas to filing lawsuits. Several of these actions set new precedents that future administrations may follow.

The examples used in this part to illustrate the actions of the Trump Administration are drawn from 104 separate congressional investigations that the Administration impeded during President Trump’s four years in office. These 104 investigations are described in greater detail in Parts III and IV.

Refusing to Comply with Congressional Requests for Documents and Witnesses

As the Supreme Court recognized in McGrain v. Daugherty¹¹ in 1927, “A legislative body cannot legislate wisely or effectively in the absence of information respecting the conditions which the legislation is intended to affect or change.” One way Congress informs itself is by requesting relevant information from the executive branch. Under the Trump Administration, however, these requests for information, documents, and testimony were often resisted using an array of methods.

Ignoring Member Requests

In May 2017, less than four months after President Trump’s inauguration, the Office of Legal Counsel in the Trump Justice Department issued an opinion¹² that a request for information from an individual member of Congress, including a ranking member of a Committee, “is not properly considered an ‘oversight’ request” and “does not trigger any obligation to accommodate congressional needs.” The opinion concluded that executive branch responses to the requests of individual members are purely “discretionary” because individual members have no constitutional authority to conduct oversight in the absence of a specific delegation by a full House, committee, or subcommittee. Even Senator Schumer, the Senate Majority Leader, had a request for information rejected¹³ under this opinion.

The Republican Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Senator Charles Grassley, called¹⁴ this policy “nonsense,” writing, “Every member of Congress is a Constitutional officer, duly elected to represent and cast votes in the interests of their constituents. ... Thus, all members need accurate information from the Executive Branch in order to carry out their Constitutional function to make informed decisions.”

Failing to Respond to Committee Requests

Committees often fared little better than individual members when requesting information from the Trump Administration. After President Trump displayed a weather map that was altered with a Sharpie marker to show the hurricane Dorian striking Alabama, the Commerce Department refused to provide documents in response to repeated requests¹⁵ from the House Science, Space, and Technology

Committee. The Education Department refused¹⁶ multiple requests by the House Oversight Committee for information and documents about the use of private email accounts by Secretary DeVos and other officials. The Department of Homeland Security provided no documents¹⁷ in response to repeated requests by the House Judiciary Committee for information about reports that President Trump offered to pardon officials carrying out his immigration policies.

Limiting Congressional Committees to Information Available to the Public

The Freedom of Information Act exempts “deliberative process” materials from disclosure to the public (5 U.S.C. § 552\(b\)\(5\)).¹⁸ It also contains other exemptions for information relating to national security, trade secrets, personal privacy, and law enforcement (5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1), (4), (6), and (7)). These exemptions do not apply to Congress, however. FOIA provides explicitly that “[t]his section is not authority to withhold information from Congress” (5 U.S.C. § 552(d)).

Notwithstanding this provision, federal agencies during the Trump Administration withheld documents from congressional committees based on the deliberative process and other FOIA privileges. In 2019, for example, the House Energy and Commerce Committee, House Education and Labor Committee, and House Ways and Means Committee investigated¹⁹ the Trump Administration’s implementation of the Affordable Care Act. As part of this inquiry, the Committees requested²⁰ in June 2019 that the Department of Health and Human Services produce analyses of the Center for Medicare & Medicaid Services’ Office of the Actuary (OACT) that found that policies under consideration by the Administration would increase health care costs and reduce insurance coverage. Citing the “deliberative process privilege,” the Department refused²¹ to produce the OACT analysis. Similarly, the Department of Interior repeatedly redacted²² documents provided to the House Natural Resources Committee based on FOIA exemptions.

In at least one instance, the State Department even refused to provide information to the House Foreign Affairs Committee that it acknowledged²³ it was required to provide to the public under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA).

Producing Irrelevant or Redacted Materials

During the Trump Administration, some agencies produced large volumes of irrelevant or redacted documents in response to congressional requests. For example, the Department of Interior sent the House Oversight Committee and the House Natural Resources Committee a production of 12,575 pages in response to the Committees' investigation into the Department's compliance with the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). An Oversight Committee analysis²⁴ showed that 12,320 of these pages were a spreadsheet of the Department's annual FOIA report, which was already available online, and the remaining documents were also already public information. In other investigations, the Interior Department provided²⁵ the House Natural Resources Committee with "thousands of pages of wingdings²⁶ and other unreadable text; whole reams of entirely blacked-out pages of data that they've 'redacted' without giving a reason (which they are required to do); printouts of unrelated emails and publicly available news articles; ... and sometimes just blank pages of nothing." A hearing²⁷ on the Interior Department's compliance with oversight requests revealed that one document production included a 934-page report from the House of Representatives and that in another case the Committee was given redacted documents while unredacted versions were released to the public under FOIA requests.

In other instances, the Department of Health and Human Services produced²⁸ entirely redacted and duplicative documents in response to the Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis's investigation into allegations that political appointees attempted to stop the publication of scientific reports related to COVID-19. The Environmental Protection Agency responded to requests from the House Committee on Science, Space, and Technology for documents related to the dangers of formaldehyde by producing²⁹ materials that were either irrelevant, nonresponsive, or extensively redacted, including documents that were already public and scans of morning news clips from Politico.

Imposing Onerous Conditions on Document Reviews

In several instances, the Trump Administration imposed onerous conditions on the review of documents requested by congressional investigators. In a House Education and Labor Committee investigation into a failed for-profit college, for example, the Department of Education offered³⁰ Committee staff an opportunity to review documents on the conditions that the review occur in camera on department premises and that agency officials could review and retain the Committee staff's notes on the documents, which the Committee rejected as "patently unreasonable." Ultimately, the Committee had to subpoena³¹ career staff in an attempt to obtain information being withheld by the Department.

Refusal to Testify at Virtual Hearings

In May 2020, the House passed H. Res. 965,³² which authorized committees to "conduct proceedings remotely" during the "public health emergency due to a novel coronavirus." In response, the Trump White House adopted a policy that it would not send witnesses to testify unless both the committee chair and the witnesses were in person. permitting proxy voting, remote hearings, and virtual depositions, the Speaker and the House majority demonstrated they are not serious about doing the job that the American people sent them to Washington to do. ... [F]ederal officials will appear in person before a committee and we ask that each Chairman do the same.”

For example, the State Department, the U.S. Agency for International Development, and the Departments of Defense and Homeland Security refused to appear at a House Oversight Committee hearing on the U.S. Strategy on Women, Peace, and Security,³⁴ a joint initiative which the four agencies had announced in June 2020. The agencies cited³⁵ White House guidance providing that agency officials will not testify unless the committee chairman and witnesses appear in person. Just a few weeks earlier, senior officials from each of these agencies had participated in an online webinar forum³⁶ on the same topic hosted by the American Enterprise Institute. Refusal of Cabinet Secretaries to Testify

While cabinet secretaries and agency heads have busy schedules and cannot accept every congressional invitation to testify, there are certain hearings where they are expected to testify. During the Trump Administration, however, cabinet secretaries broke from precedent and refused to appear for these customary hearings.

One example is the annual budget hearings held by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees. According to the Congressional Research Service,³⁸ “As part of the annual appropriations process, agency leaders are expected to appear before appropriations subcommittees to justify their agencies’ budget requests. This means that the heads of Cabinet departments and other agencies are likely to testify before Congress at least once per year.” After appearing in 2019 for this purpose, Secretary of Similarly, Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross refused⁴⁰ to testify before the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, and Science to justify his department’s budget request in 2019.

Another example involves the annual hearing held by the House Committee on Homeland Security on threats facing the nation to inform Congress and the public on the current state of national security. Prior to the Trump Administration, both Republican and Democratic administrations had cooperated⁴¹ by sending the heads of the Department of Homeland Security, the FBI, and the National Counterterrorism Center to testify. In September 2020, however, Acting DHS Secretary Chad Wolf reneged on his agreement to appear at this hearing on the grounds that the President had recently nominated him to be Secretary. In this case, the Chairman of the Committee then issued a subpoena⁴² for his testimony, pointing out that Mr. Wolf had served as Acting Secretary for the prior ten months and was in no way prevented from appearing before the committee by his nomination, yet Mr. Wolf still refused to appear.⁴³

Notwithstanding the laws protecting Congress' right to receive information from federal officials, the Trump Administration resisted allowing these officials to provide information to congressional committees. For example, from April to October 2019, the House Committee on Science, Space, and Technology sent three written requests for a briefing from officials regarding the suppression of a report on the dangers of formaldehyde (April 3, 2019, letter;⁴⁸ July 18, 2019, letter;⁴⁹ October 29, 2019, letter⁵⁰). The Environmental Protection Agency did not allow the officials to speak with the Committee, forcing the Committee to issue⁵¹ a subpoena. Refusing to Comply with Committee Subpoenas for Documents and Witnesses through a prosecution for contempt of Congress or the judicial branch through an order compelling compliance. The Trump Administration often defied congressional subpoenas. Claiming Absolute Immunity for Advisors to the President

The Office of Legal Counsel at the Department of Justice has asserted⁵⁵ since the 1940s that the president can claim absolute immunity for senior advisors, but the courts that have considered the issue have disagreed. In 2008, the federal district court in D.C. ruled⁵⁶ that the former White House Counsel to President George W. Bush, Harriet Miers, lacked absolute immunity and had to appear before Congress and claim executive privilege on a question-by-question basis. In 2019, then-federal district court judge Ketanji Brown Jackson reached the same conclusion⁵⁷ in a case involving President Trump’s former White House Counsel, Donald McGahn. After a panel of the D.C. Circuit ruled that the court lacked authority to decide the McGahn case and the full D.C. Circuit agreed to a rehearing en banc, this case was settled⁵⁸ by the Biden Administration in 2021 before the D.C. Circuit could reach the merits of the case.

In practice, prior presidents have resisted testing the extent of their authority and have claimed absolute immunity only in rare cases. As Co-Equal has documented,⁵⁹ a wide range of senior officials – including Chiefs of Staff, White House Counsels, and National Security Advisors – have testified before Congress as part of the traditional accommodation process.

President Trump took a different approach. He readily claimed absolute immunity and did not seek to accommodate congressional interests. He asserted⁶⁰ absolute immunity for Mr. McGahn when the House Judiciary Committee subpoenaed him to testify about former FBI Director Robert Mueller’s

Even after his term of office expired, former President Trump attempted to assert absolute immunity for his advisors. In September 2021, the House Select Committee to Investigate the January 6th Attack on the United States Capitol subpoenaed⁶³ Mr. Trump's former chief of staff, Mark Meadows, seeking documents and a deposition. Mr. Trump, through a representative, claimed that "Mr. Meadows is immune from compelled testimony on matters related to his official responsibilities" and instructed⁶⁴ Mr. Meadows to refrain from providing documents or testifying relating to official matters. President Biden took a different position and declined⁶⁵ to assert a claim of executive privilege or immunity over Mr. Meadows' document production or testimony. In October 2021, after initially agreeing to cooperate with the Committee, Mr. Meadows filed⁶⁶ a lawsuit in the District Court for the District of Columbia seeking to block the subpoenas. In July 2022, in response to an invitation from the presiding judge in that case, the Justice Department filed⁶⁷ a statement of interest describing its view that while advisors to sitting presidents are entitled to absolute immunity, advisors to former presidents have only a form of qualified immunity. According to this view, an advisor to a former president must testify about their official duties only if Congress' "subpoena seeks evidence in service of a valid and sufficiently important legislative interest[, the] evidence is sufficiently relevant to that interest, and [Congress] has shown that [the evidence] could not reasonably be obtained elsewhere." Invoking Executive Privilege

Traditionally, presidents have invoked executive privilege when refusing to comply with a congressional subpoena for documents. This is not an absolute privilege, but one that is weighed⁶⁹ against Congress’ need for the information in determining whether information should be disclosed. President Trump invoked⁷⁰ this privilege to withhold specific documents sought by the House Oversight Committee in its investigation of the Commerce Department’s attempt to add a citizenship question to the 2020 census.

Asserting a Protective Claim of Executive Privilege

In addition to asserting the traditional executive privilege to withhold documents from Congress, the Trump Administration developed a new type of executive privilege claim: one that was applied broadly to information that might be subject to a traditional claim of executive privilege by the president at some point in the future. This new protective executive privilege was used in response to the House Oversight Committee’s investigation of the Census citizenship question, where the White House claimed a privilege⁷¹ over tens of thousands of pages of responsive documents to “give the President ‘the ability to make a final decision whether to assert privilege following a full review.’”

President Clinton previously used⁷² a protective claim of executive privilege to temporarily withhold subpoenaed White House documents that he had not yet finished reviewing, but in that case, President Clinton followed up a few weeks later with a formal assertion of privilege over specific documents. The Trump Administration, by contrast, never provided the Oversight Committee with any final assertions of privilege, not even after two Cabinet Secretaries, Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross and Attorney General William Barr, were held in contempt. According to the Oversight Committee, “the Administration's broad 'protective' assertion of privilege over all remaining responsive documents" meant⁷³ "the Committee is unable to complete its investigation."

In the House Judiciary Committee's investigation of Russian interference in the 2016 election, the Committee subpoenaed⁷⁴ a wide range of documents collected by Special Counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation. The Trump Administration similarly invoked⁷⁵ a protective claim of executive privilege to justify withholding the documents from the Committee.

A protective claim of executive privilege fundamentally alters the traditional relationship between Congress and the executive branch. As a commentator wrote,⁷⁶ a protective assertion of executive privilege "provides the executive branch with the authority to ignore and countermand congressional subpoenas without the president ever asserting executive privilege and without the need to undertake the balancing inquiry at the heart of the privilege."

Refusing to Comply with Subpoenas for Documents without Claiming Executive Privilege

Congress takes the position⁷⁷ that it is required to recognize only constitutional privileges, like executive privilege or the privilege against self-incrimination. The Trump Administration, however, often refused to comply with a subpoena without a formal assertion of executive privilege, citing an array of reasons. The General Services Administration refused⁷⁸ to produce subpoenaed documents relating to the lease of federal property to the Trump International Hotel, arguing⁷⁹ that its lease agreement constrained its ability to disclose confidential financial information and that legal memoranda are protected by attorney-client privilege and "core confidentiality interests of the Executive Branch." Directing Officials Not to Comply with Congressional Subpoenas for Testimony

As described above, multiple laws protect Congress' right to receive information from federal officials. Notwithstanding these laws, the Trump Administration directed federal officials not to comply with congressional subpoenas for testimony. During the Ukraine impeachment investigation, the White House Counsel wrote⁸² the House Speaker and committee chairs that "President Trump cannot permit his Administration to participate in this partisan inquiry under these circumstances." Twelve current or former officials refused to testify⁸³ – ten of them after being subpoenaed – pursuant to this White House directive.

Directing Officials Not to Appear at Depositions without Agency Counsel

A long-standing House rule provides that witnesses in depositions can be represented by personal counsel, but counsel for other parties, such as agency counsel, cannot participate. The rationale for the rule is to preserve the integrity of the investigation, to avoid providing a roadmap of the investigation to the agency being investigated, and to prevent the agency counsel from obstructing the proceeding. As a Co-Equal precedent report documents,⁸⁴ this was the rule adopted in the campaign finance investigation led by House Oversight Committee Chair Dan Burton during the Clinton Administration, the Benghazi investigation, and in all House depositions starting in 2015.

The Trump Administration, however, directed its officials not to participate in depositions under the rule. For example, as part of its investigation into the Commerce Department's decision to add a

Firing and Demoting Government Officials Who Comply with Congressional Demands

Some federal officials, principally career officials, appeared before Congress despite the Trump Administration directives not to testify, as they are legally entitled to do under at least seven federal laws.⁸⁸ They typically took this step after receiving a committee subpoena compelling their testimony.

The Trump Administration retaliated against some of these federal officials for their cooperation with Congress. In the Ukraine impeachment investigation, President Trump used Twitter to disparage several of the witnesses, including former U.S. Ambassador to Ukraine Marie Yovanovitch,⁸⁹ National Security Council Director of European Affairs Alexander Vindman,⁹⁰ and special advisor to the Vice President Jennifer Williams.⁹¹ Some officials who testified were removed from their positions. Refusing to Cooperate with Impeachment Inquiry

As a Co-Equal precedent report demonstrates,⁹⁶ prior presidents cooperated extensively with impeachment investigations. President Nixon waived executive privilege to allow current and former top aides such as his Chief of Staff and White House Counsel to testify before the Senate Select Committee, produced documentary and testimonial evidence to the Special Prosecutor during the fact-finding portion of the inquiry, and provided additional documents to the House Judiciary Committee. His counsel also attended, made presentations, and provided a closing argument during the Judiciary Committee's proceedings. President Clinton similarly cooperated extensively with the fact-finding investigation, which was conducted by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, as well as the House Judiciary Committee impeachment proceedings. President Clinton and many of his top aides provided testimony and documents to Independent Counsel Starr, the President's counsel posed questions to Mr. Starr during the Committee proceedings, and the President provided interrogatory responses to Committee questions.

In contrast to past presidents, the Trump Administration categorically refused to comply with Congress during the Ukraine impeachment inquiry. In a letter to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and the Chairs of the House Intelligence, Foreign Affairs, and Oversight Committees, the White House Counsel wrote⁹⁷ that "President Trump and his Administration reject your baseless, unconstitutional efforts to overturn the democratic process. ... In order to fulfill his duties to the American people, the Constitution, the Executive Branch, and all future occupants of the Office of the Presidency, President Trump and his Administration cannot participate in your partisan and unconstitutional inquiry." directive, the Trump Administration refused⁹⁸ to provide documents to Congress and directed⁹⁹ federal officials not to testify.

Making Officials Sign Nondisclosure Agreements

Federal officials with access to classified information are required to sign agreements that they will not disclose this information, but prior to the Trump Administration, there was no precedent¹⁰⁰ for requiring officials to sign broadly worded nondisclosure agreements. As a private citizen, Mr. Trump had required¹⁰¹ employees to sign nondisclosure agreements. After his election, he brought¹⁰² this practice into the White House.

The legality of the nondisclosure agreements required by the Trump Administration is uncertain. The First Amendment limits¹⁰³ the government's authority to restrict speech by federal employees, with the limits being especially strict for former employees. The Whistleblower Protection Act (5 U.S.C. § 2302\(b\))¹⁰⁴ prohibits the federal government from taking action against any federal employee who discloses illegal conduct, gross mismanagement, or an abuse of authority. As a Co-Equal precedent report demonstrates,¹⁰⁵ there are several laws that prohibit the executive branch from preventing federal employees from communicating with Congress.

In October 2020, the Department of Justice brought a lawsuit¹⁰⁶ against an advisor to First Lady Melania Trump for violation of a nondisclosure agreement. Congressional efforts to investigate the nondisclosure agreements were stymied by the White House. Blocking Third Parties from Cooperating with Congress

Requiring Contractors to Sign Nondisclosure Agreements

During the Trump Administration, federal agencies required government contractors to sign nondisclosure agreements, which the contractors used as a basis for denying congressional investigators access to requested information. For example, Senate Minority Leader Charles Schumer and Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee ranking member Patty Murray sent¹¹¹ a letter to TeleTracking Technologies regarding its contract with the Trump Administration, following reports that the Administration had ordered hospitals to report COVID data to this company instead of following the standard practice of reporting hospitalization data to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

The Constitution prevents subjects of congressional oversight from going to court to interfere in conduct of the investigation. As the Supreme Court held in Eastland v. United States Servicemen's Fund,¹¹⁴ the Speech or Debate Clause protects Congress from being sued for its official actions, such as issuance of a subpoena. Some courts have recognized an exception to this rule, however. If a congressional subpoena seeks records from a bank or other third party, the party whose records are being sought can challenge the subpoena by filing a lawsuit to stop the third party from releasing the records to Congress. President Trump took advantage of this exception when congressional committees sought his financial records.

In 2019, three House committees issued subpoenas for President Trump's business and financial records. The House Oversight Committee subpoenaed¹¹⁵ President Trump's financial records from his accounting firm, Mazars USA, as part of its investigation into the adequacy of his financial disclosures. The House Committee on Financial Services subpoenaed¹¹⁶ Deutsche Bank and Capital One Bank for records relating to Mr. Trump's financial transactions with Russian oligarchs. And the House Select Committee on Intelligence subpoenaed¹¹⁷ Deutsche Bank for records to evaluate leverage that foreign actors potentially had over President Trump, his family, and his businesses.

House Judiciary Committee with information relating to the influence of Russia on the 2016 election beyond what had already been publicly released in the report by Special Counsel Robert Mueller.

Violating Statutory Requirements to Provide Information to Congress

Refusal to Provide Tax Records

The Internal Revenue Code gives the House Committee on Ways and Means, the Senate Committee on Finance, and the Joint Committee on Taxation authority to obtain tax returns upon written request to the Secretary of Treasury. Congress enacted this provision (26 U.S.C. § 6103\(f\))¹³⁴ in 1924 after questions arose¹³⁵ regarding whether Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon had financial conflicts of interest. Prior to the Trump Administration, the authority had been used¹³⁶ many times without controversy. According to the Ways and Means Committee, the Treasury Department had never refused¹³⁷ to provide requested returns prior to President Trump.

After President Trump broke with tradition and refused to release his tax returns publicly, the House Ways and Means Committee requested¹³⁸ his returns under section 6103(f). Despite the mandatory language in section 6103(f) and the long history of agency compliance, the Treasury Secretary refused¹³⁹ to provide the returns, asserting that Congress had no legitimate legislative purpose in seeking the returns. The Committee then issued¹⁴⁰ a subpoena for the returns, which the Treasury Secretary also rejected.¹⁴¹ The Committee filed¹⁴² a suit to obtain the returns in July 2019.

In December 2021, a Trump-appointed federal judge ruled¹⁴³ that the tax returns must be provided to the committee. The D.C. Circuit affirmed¹⁴⁴ the lower court decision. In November 2022, the Supreme Court declined to stay the D.C. Circuit ruling, and the House obtained the tax returns from the Treasury Department.¹⁴⁵

Violating Reporting Requirements

In several cases, the Trump Administration ignored or defied statutory requirements to inform Congress on key matters of national security. For example, the 2020 National Defense Authorization Act required the Director of National Intelligence to produce an unclassified report on the killing of Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi. The Trump Administration ignored the law, providing only a classified report in February 2020. In separate letters, the Chairman of the House Intelligence Committee and the bipartisan leaders of the Senate Intelligence Committee demanded¹⁴⁶ that the Director of National Intelligence declassify the key information and comply with the law, but the Trump Administration refused. Congress did not receive the declassified report until its release¹⁴⁷ by the Biden Administration in February 2021.

Violating Requirements to Consult with Congress

A 1980 law requires the President to consult with Congress on the annual determination of caps on the number of refugees allowed to enter the United States and how to allocate refugee caps among different regions. In multiple years, President Trump failed to meet this statutory obligation,¹⁴⁸ ignoring congressional requests in 2019¹⁴⁹ and 2020¹⁵⁰ for the administration's proposed refugee admissions report.

Violating the "Seven Member" Rule

The "Seven Member" Rule (5 U.S.C. § 2954)¹⁵¹ requires a federal agency to "submit any information requested of it relating to any matter within the jurisdiction of the committee" when requested by seven or more members of the House Oversight Committee or five or more members of the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee. The provision was enacted in 1928 as part of a streamlining government bill that eliminated¹⁵² 128 reports the executive branch was required to submit to Congress. The idea was that the ability to request and receive information when needed would replace ongoing obligations to report on information that was no longer relevant.

As part of an investigation of the federal lease of the Old Post Office Building for the Trump Hotel, 18 members of the House Oversight Committee made a request¹⁵³ under the Seven Member Rule to the General Services Administration for documents relating to the lease. As the members noted, the Obama Administration had previously cooperated with a request under the Seven Member Rule on the same topic. Despite the mandatory language used in the statute and the agency's prior cooperation, GSA under the Trump Administration refused to comply.

The members sued¹⁵⁴ GSA in 2017. The issues in the litigation revolved around whether the requirements of the Seven Member Rule are judicially enforceable. A three-judge panel D.C. Circuit upheld¹⁵⁵ the standing of the members to sue in 2020, a decision that was affirmed¹⁵⁶ by the full court in 2022 after a rehearing en banc.

Other Tactics to Keep Information from Congress

Refusing to Provide Briefings

In addition to document productions and hearing testimony, members of Congress rely on briefings from executive branch officials to obtain information needed to inform their legislative work. The Trump Administration refused to provide these briefings on multiple occasions, sometimes in retaliation for ongoing congressional oversight requests. For example, the State Department took the retaliatory action of cancelling¹⁵⁷ staff-level briefings for the House Foreign Relations Committee on national security matters because of the Committee's unrelated investigation into the firing of former State Department Inspector General Steve Linick. During peace talks between the Taliban, the Afghan government, and the U.S., the State Department repeatedly refused¹⁵⁸ to make the U.S.'s top negotiator, Zalmay Khalilzad, available to brief members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. After three separate requests, Ambassador Khalilzad appeared¹⁵⁹ before the Committee only after it issued a subpoena for his testimony. more urgent, the Director of National Intelligence John Ratcliffe halted¹⁶⁰ a long-standing practice of briefing senior members of Congress in person.

Blocking Access to Federal Facilities

Members of Congress have historically used visits to federal facilities to conduct fact-finding on the ground and bring attention to pressing issues, but during the Trump Administration, these visits were sometimes curtailed. In the fall of 2020, members of Congress sought to visit local postal facilities to investigate severe mail delays, but the U.S. Postal Service blocked¹⁶¹ their access. The Postal Service claimed that the Hatch Act bars tour requests from anyone on a ballot within 45 days, notwithstanding an opinion¹⁶² by the Office of Special Counsel, which enforces the Hatch Act, that members of Congress can visit federal facilities for an official purpose. During the Trump Administration's implementation of a border policy that separated children from their parents, members of Congress were denied entry¹⁶³ into immigrant detention facilities. Eventually, they were told that they could tour the facilities only on certain days and with two weeks' prior notice, raising questions about whether their visit would provide accurate information about the conditions at the facilities.

Refusing to Cooperate with GAO Requests

The Government Accountability Office is a legislative support agency that was created in 1921 to assist in Congress' oversight of the federal government. The agency has broad statutory authority to investigate "all matters related to the receipt, disbursement and use of public money" (31 U.S.C. § 712).¹⁶⁴ The Trump Administration, however, frequently ignored GAO's information requests and withheld information from the agency. Examples of the Administration's widespread noncooperation with GAO include:

III. Trump White House Examples

During President Trump’s four years in office, his White House refused to cooperate with at least 25 different congressional investigations. These investigations ranged from impeachment inquiries to investigations into Russian interference in the 2016 election, the President’s tax and financial records, ethics violations, and other subjects.

Impeachment Investigations

The Constitution gives Congress the impeachment power. Recognizing Congress’ constitutional role, past presidents cooperated with prior impeachment inquiries. As Co-Equal has documented,¹⁶⁹ President Nixon cooperated extensively with the fact-finding investigation that preceded the House Judiciary Committee’s impeachment proceedings, including by waiving executive privilege to allow current and former top aides such as his Chief of Staff and White House Counsel to testify before the Senate Select Committee, producing documentary and testimonial evidence to the Special Prosecutor during the fact-finding portion of the inquiry, and providing additional documents to the House Judiciary Committee. His counsel also attended, made presentations, and provided a closing argument during the Judiciary Committee’s proceedings.

President Clinton, too, cooperated extensively with the fact-finding investigation, which was conducted by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, as well as the House Judiciary Committee impeachment proceedings. President Clinton and many of his top aides provided testimony and documents to Independent Counsel Starr, the President's counsel posed questions to Mr. Starr during the Committee proceedings, and the President provided interrogatory responses to Committee questions.

In contrast to past presidents, the Trump Administration categorically refused to comply with Congress during the first impeachment inquiry. The Trump Administration became the first presidential administration in American history to refuse to cooperate with an impeachment inquiry.

The Ukraine Impeachment

On September 24, 2019, the Speaker of the House, Nancy Pelosi, announced¹⁷⁰ that the House would begin an inquiry into whether President Trump's efforts to pressure Ukraine to investigate Joe Biden warranted impeachment. The investigation was conducted jointly by the House Intelligence, Oversight and Reform, and Foreign Affairs committees. President Trump called¹⁷¹ this action "a disgrace" and asserted that Congress "shouldn't be allowed" to impeach him. In October 2019, his White House Counsel confirmed¹⁷² that the President had directed his Administration not to cooperate, writing House congressional leaders that "President Trump and his Administration cannot participate in your partisan and unconstitutional inquiry."

At the direction of the White House, 12 current or former Administration officials refused to testify¹⁷³ in the inquiry. These officials were:

- Mick Mulvaney, the Acting White House Chief of Staff;
- Robert B. Blair, the Assistant to the President and Senior Advisor to the Chief of Staff;

While a few officials did appear¹⁷⁴ before the House committees, they did so under subpoena and in defiance of the White House directive. The White House retaliated against several of these witnesses. President Trump used Twitter to disparage former U.S. Ambassador to Ukraine Marie Yovanovitch,¹⁷⁵ National Security Council Director of European Affairs Alexander Vindman,¹⁷⁶ and special advisor to the Vice President Jennifer Williams.¹⁷⁷ Some officials who testified were removed from their positions. For example, after Lt. Col. Vindman testified about his concerns about President Trump's conduct in a July 2019 phone call with the President of Ukraine, he was relieved from his position¹⁷⁸ as a National Security Council aide and escorted out of the White House. The President also fired¹⁷⁹ U.S. Ambassador to the European Union Gordon Sondland following Ambassador Sondland's testimony that "everyone was in the loop" about the President's interest in pressuring Ukraine to do political investigations. Two months later, President Trump also fired¹⁸⁰ Michael Atkinson, the Intelligence Community Inspector General who first informed Congress of a whistleblower complaint regarding President Trump's call with the President of Ukraine and also testified¹⁸¹ before the Intelligence Committee.

The Trump Administration similarly resisted document requests. The White House, the Office of the Vice President, the Office of Management and Budget, the Department of State, the Department of Defense, and the Department of Energy refused to produce a single document¹⁸² in response to 71 individualized requests for information related to the impeachment inquiry. For example, the Office of Management and Budget, which played a central role in the freezing of military assistance funds to Ukraine that was under scrutiny in the impeachment inquiry, failed to respond¹⁸³ to any of the nine categories of information in a congressional subpoena it received. The State Department likewise refused to produce¹⁸⁴ documents, directed officials not to provide responsive materials in their possession, and even blocked Ambassador Sondland from reviewing records relevant to his preparation for Committee testimony.

At the direction of President Trump, the White House did release the transcript of the call between President Trump and President Zelensky of Ukraine. But this action was taken for public relations reasons, with the Washington Post reporting¹⁸⁵ that the President believed the release would "embarrass his critics and political opponents." Further, in contrast to previous presidents, President Trump refused to participate¹⁸⁷ in the House Judiciary Committee’s hearings and deliberations. The President’s counsel declined¹⁸⁸ to ask Committee hearing witnesses questions or even to attend the hearings at all, even though the procedural rules approved for the impeachment inquiry provided for such participation.

The January 6 Insurrection Impeachment

The second impeachment¹⁸⁹ of President Trump did not include a formal investigation, as it responded directly to President Trump’s public role in inciting the January 6, 2021, insurrection. However, after leaving office, Mr. Trump continued to try to block allies from testifying in the House Select Committee’s investigation into January 6, vowing¹⁹⁰ to “fight the Subpoenas on Executive Privilege and other grounds, for the good of our Country.” These efforts included filing a lawsuit to block the release of records related to his role in the insurrection. The Supreme Court rejected his request¹⁹¹ to withhold the presidential records in January 2022, upholding the ruling of the D.C. Circuit¹⁹² that even if Mr. Trump were the sitting president, the congressional interest in obtaining the documents would outweigh his executive privilege claims.

Mr. Trump’s effectiveness in preventing cooperation with Congress was significantly diminished during his post-presidency, especially following the Supreme Court’s decision. The precedents set during this period are beyond the scope of this analysis.

Other White House Investigations

The Trump White House or President Trump in his personal capacity also refused to cooperate with at least 23 other congressional investigations, including inquiries into Russia’s interference with the 2016 presidential election, President Trump’s communications with Russian President Vladimir Putin, President Trump’s financial and tax records, taxpayer expenditures for Trump family travel, and plans to

Russian Interference in U.S. Politics

The report by Special Counsel Robert Mueller on Russian efforts to interfere with the 2016 presidential election raised significant questions about the involvement of the Trump campaign and President Trump’s efforts to obstruct the Mueller investigation. In April 2019, the House Judiciary Committee issued a subpoena¹⁹⁴ for documents and hearing testimony to former White House Counsel Donald McGahn, who was quoted in the Mueller report describing several instances when President Trump asked him to lie or obstruct the investigation. President Trump refused to allow Mr. McGahn to cooperate, taking the position¹⁹⁵ that the Administration would be “fighting all the subpoenas” issued by the House.

In litigation brought by the House to enforce the McGahn subpoena, a judge asked¹⁹⁶ during oral argument whether there has ever been “such broad-scale defiance of a congressional request for information in the history of the Republic.” The president’s counsel responded, “Not to my knowledge.” In 2021, the Biden Justice Department settled the litigation,¹⁹⁷ allowing Mr. McGahn to testify before the Committee.

The White House also blocked¹⁹⁸ several other presidential aides from testifying at congressional hearings regarding Russian election interference. Three Inquiries into Potential Foreign Emoluments Clause Violations

Two congressional committees investigated whether President Trump or Trump family members were profiting from the actions of foreign governments in violation of the Constitution's prohibition on federal officeholders receiving any "emolument" from a foreign state or monarch without the consent of Congress. These investigations were triggered by reports indicating President Trump had ignored this requirement and had received:

- grants of trademarks from China,²⁶¹
- profits from the decision of Saudi Arabia²⁶² to spend over $270,000 and book 500 rooms at the Trump hotels during a three-month period,
- profits from an event held at the Trump Hotel by the Embassy of the Philippines,²⁶³ and
- profits from attempts by other countries²⁶⁴ to curry favor by being conspicuous customers²⁶⁵ at Trump properties.

The House Committees on Oversight and Reform and Judiciary both opened investigations, with both the Oversight Committee²⁶⁶ and the Judiciary Committee²⁶⁷ sending document requests to the Trump Organization. issue subpoenas³⁰² for the information in 2019, but the White House still failed to produce the subpoenaed documents.

Following the 2020 election, committee chairs across the House of Representatives sent letters³⁰³ directing the White House and more than 50 federal agencies to comply with federal recordkeeping laws and preserve information responsive to congressional subpoenas and investigations, noting that the Trump Administration had obstructed numerous congressional investigations and was required by law to ensure that any information previously requested by Congress be preserved. Despite this explicit request, Mr. Trump transferred presidential records to his Florida residence. After news reports disclosed the missing records, Mr. Trump allowed the National Archives to retrieve³⁰⁴ 15 boxes of records, but it took a subpoena and an FBI search to obtain additional presidential records, some of which were top secret.³⁰⁵

After President Trump left office, reports emerged that he regularly tore up documents³⁰⁶ and even flushed them down the toilet³⁰⁷ in violation of the Presidential Records Act, which requires presidential materials to be preserved. IV. Trump Agency Examples

The Trump Administration’s practices of resisting congressional oversight extended to at least 17 agencies that refused to produce documents, make key officials available for testimony, or otherwise cooperate with at least 79 congressional inquiries. These actions impeded Congress’s ability to investigate whether policy decisions were made for inappropriate political or financial reasons and to hold the Administration accountable for its actions.

The Department of Homeland Security, for example, defied subpoenas for documents or testimony in nearly a dozen different investigations, including investigations into child separation at the border, racist and sexually violent social media posts by Customs and Border Patrol agents, and practices that prevented asylum seekers from entering the U.S. In an investigation of political motivations for adding a citizenship question to the 2020 Census, Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross and Attorney General William Barr refused to produce internal memos even after being issued subpoenas and held in contempt of Congress by the U.S. House of Representatives. In some cases, this obstruction also defied statutory requirements, such as when the Director of National Intelligence refused to release an unclassified report on the murder of Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi, as required by law.

Adding a Citizenship Question to the Census

In March 2018, the Commerce Department announced plans³¹² to add a question on citizenship to the 2020 Census, despite research from its own experts indicating that the question would likely reduce responses from households with noncitizens and lead to higher costs and a less accurate count.

According to Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross, he took this action³¹³ in response to a request from the Justice Department for information to improve enforcement of the Voting Rights Act. Rep. Elijah Cummings, the ranking member of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, requested documents on the decision from the Commerce and Justice Departments in April³¹⁴ and May³¹⁵ in 2018. In 2019, after Democrats took control of the House, Chairman Cummings renewed his requests to the Departments in January³¹⁶ and February³¹⁷ in 2019.

After the Department produced documents that were extensively redacted or already public, the Committee issued subpoenas³¹⁸ for the documents in April 2019. The Departments continued to resist providing the documents, leading Chairman Cummings to write³¹⁹ to Secretary Ross that the Committee would vote to hold him in contempt unless he produced 11 key documents and to write³²⁰ to Attorney General William Barr that the Committee would hold him in contempt unless he produced a similar small subset of key documents. President Trump then asserted³²¹ executive privilege over the specific key documents sought by the Committee and a broad “protective assertion of executive privilege” over all the remaining documents covered by the subpoenas to “ensur[e] the President’s ability to make a final decision whether to assert privilege following a full review of the documents.” The Committee

In June 2019, in a separate suit, the Supreme Court held³²⁴ that the Commerce Department’s proffered justification for adding the citizenship question to the U.S. Census, which was that the Department of Justice needed the information to enforce the Voting Rights Act—the same justification Secretary Ross offered the Committee while testifying under oath—was pretextual and in violation of the Administrative Procedure Act. after President Trump left office, the House Committee on Oversight and Reform requested³²⁹ the production of documents relating to data errors and delays with the 2020 Census. After the Department produced a set of documents that were unresponsive to the Committee's concerns and in some cases badly outdated, the Committee issued a subpoena³³⁰ to Secretary Ross in December 2020. Secretary Ross refused to comply with the subpoena.

Conflicts of Interest

Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross repeatedly refused to comply³³¹ with the House Oversight Committee's request for documents about his financial conflicts of interest, including his compliance with federal ethics laws and regulations and the accuracy of his public financial disclosures. As Hurricane Dorian approached in 2019, President Trump incorrectly tweeted that Alabama was in the path of the storm. Borrower Defense

After President Trump took office in 2017, the Education Department delayed and attempted to dilute³⁴⁹ relief to thousands of students who had filed for debt relief under the Department’s “Borrower Defense” program that provides for loan forgiveness when an educational institution misleads students in the enrollment process or violates state law. Title IX

In 2018, Education Secretary Betsy DeVos released³⁵⁶ a proposed rule for sexual harassment and assault on college campuses under Title IX that many advocates for survivors of sexual violence believed would make it less likely for sexual assault to be reported. Department of Homeland Security

Two Inquiries into Child Separation

In April 2018, the Trump Administration announced a “zero tolerance” policy³⁶² under which it criminally prosecuted all individuals who illegally crossed the U.S. border. Since children cannot legally be detained in the United States for longer than 20 days and adults being prosecuted for illegal border crossing were often detained longer than that, more than 5,000 migrant children were separated from their families during the Trump Administration. As of December 2020, more than 600 children had not been reunited with their parents. The House Homeland Security Committee investigated the role of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) in the Administration’s planning and implementation of this policy, requesting³⁶³ relevant documents in January 2019. The Committee obtained only incomplete responses; it detailed³⁶⁴ its efforts to obtain the documents and the “significant omissions” in DHS’s productions in October 2019. In November 2019, the Homeland Security Committee issued a subpoena³⁶⁵ for the withheld documents. DHS refused³⁶⁶ to comply with the subpoena.

In July 2018, the House Oversight and Reform Committee wrote a bipartisan letter³⁶⁷ to the Departments of Homeland Security, Justice, and Health and Human Services seeking information about child separation. After receiving no response, the Committee issued bipartisan subpoenas³⁶⁸ to the 2020, yet CBP still refused³⁷⁶ to provide all requested documents and heavily redacted many of the documents it did produce. The documents were not provided to the Committee until February 2021, after President Trump left office. They showed³⁷⁷ that while more than 60 agents were found to have committed misconduct, only two were fired, and 57 of them continue to work with migrants.

Critically Ill Children

In August 2019, the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) stopped considering requests for deferred action from immigrants with nonmilitary special circumstances, such as children with life-threatening conditions,³⁷⁸ which temporarily ensures they will not face deportation. To conduct oversight on this decision, the Subcommittee on Civil Rights and Civil Liberties of the House Committee on Oversight and Reform invited the acting directors of USCIS and the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to testify at a hearing. DHS agreed to provide witnesses only after the Subcommittee threatened a subpoena, but then on the eve of the scheduled hearing informed the Subcommittee that it would bar its witnesses from answering³⁷⁹ most questions because a private party had sued DHS and provided only limited testimony. After the hearing, DHS continued to refuse to produce the requested documents, leading Chairman Cummings to issue subpoenas³⁸⁰ for documents in October 2019, his last official act in Congress before his death.

Treatment of Asylum Seekers

In April 2018, Customs and Border Protection began consistently utilizing a practice known as “metering”³⁸¹ under which the agency turned back asylum seekers at the U.S.-Mexico border and put them on a waiting list. U.S. law allows anyone who has entered the U.S. to apply for asylum, and administrations prior to the Trump Administration had applied the metering practice only sparingly, in times of extreme applicant backlogs. DHS resisted efforts by the House Homeland Security Committee to conduct oversight on this issue, refusing to provide a complete production of documents in response to a January 2019 request³⁸² and multiple follow-up requests,³⁸³ which ultimately led to a subpoena issued in November 2019.³⁸⁴ DHS’s response to the subpoena did not include all relevant documents, and those that it produced had “extensive and improper redactions.”³⁸⁵

Invasive Medical Procedures

In September 2020, the House Committee on Oversight and Reform and Committee on Homeland Security investigated reports³⁸⁶ that a facility in Georgia that contracted with ICE to detain migrants had performed unnecessary invasive gynecological procedures on detainees, including removal of their uteruses, and had failed to maintain appropriate protocols to protect detainees from exposure to the coronavirus. The claims were raised by a nurse who worked at the facility, among others. In response to a document request from the Committees, ICE indicated³⁸⁷ that it was withholding responsive documents based on the fact that the DHS Inspector General was also investigating this issue. Pardons for Illegal Activities

The New York Times³⁸⁹ and Washington Post³⁹⁰ reported that President Trump offered to pardon Homeland Security officials who carried out illegal activities in response to his orders, including closing the border with Mexico and seizing land needed to construct a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border. After several requests for information were ignored, the House Judiciary Committee issued subpoenas³⁹¹ for the production of documents about this “pardon dangling.” The Administration did not comply with the subpoenas.

Coronavirus Response

Beginning in March 2020, the House Committee on Oversight and Reform requested³⁹² information from DHS on supplies and distribution of personal protective equipment (PPE) in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, which was largely being coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). FEMA response provided only nine contracts, while a publicly available database indicated that FEMA had issued nearly 200 contracts related to COVID-19. FEMA failed to respond³⁹³ to follow-up requests in April and May 2020 regarding PPE distribution among the states and territories.

Trusted Traveler Programs

In February 2020, the Trump Administration barred³⁹⁴ New York State residents from enrolling in the “Trusted Traveler Programs” (TTP) that expedite international travel by speeding security screening at ports of entry. The Administration justified singling out New York on the grounds that the state had enacted a unique law that prevented the CBP from accessing state driver records necessary to assess risks posed by applicants to TTP, but later acknowledged³⁹⁵ other states had enacted similar restrictions. The House Homeland Security Committee investigated allegedly misleading testimony by Acting DHS Secretary Chad Wolf and another senior official, issuing³⁹⁶ a subpoena to DHS for relevant documents following three unsuccessful requests for DHS’s cooperation. DHS refused³⁹⁷ to comply, arguing that the Committee lacked a “legitimate legislative purpose” in investigating the matter because lying to Congress is a crime under the investigative purview of the executive and judicial branches.

Annual Hearing on Threats Facing the Nation

The House Committee on Homeland Security holds an annual hearing on threats facing the nation to inform Congress and the public on the current state of national security. Prior to the Trump Administration, both Republican and Democratic administrations had cooperated³⁹⁸ with the Committee in providing this annual assessment. In September 2020, Acting DHS Secretary Chad Wolf reneged on his agreement to appear at this hearing on the grounds that the President had recently nominated him to be Secretary. Violations of Whistleblower Rights

In 2017, the Chair and Ranking Member of the House Committee on Oversight and Reform Subcommittee on Government Operations sent bipartisan requests⁴⁰² to multiple federal agencies, including DHS, requesting information on reports that employees were being instructed to sign nondisclosure agreements that may violate their rights under the Whistleblower Protection Act. ACA Implementation

In 2019, the House Energy and Commerce Committee and House Ways and Means Committee investigated⁴⁰⁷ the Trump Administration's implementation of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). As part of this inquiry, the Committees requested⁴⁰⁸ that HHS produce an analysis by the Center for Medicare & Medicaid Services' Office of the Actuary (OACT) that found that policies under consideration by the Administration would increase health care costs and reduce insurance coverage. Citing the "deliberative process privilege," the Administration refused⁴⁰⁹ to produce the OACT analysis even though it had previously produced a memo that discussed the substance of the OACT analysis and the Committee had released the memo to the public without HHS objection.

Government Accountability Office Report on COVID Vaccine Development

The House Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis submitted⁴¹⁸ a bipartisan request for a GAO report on COVID vaccine deployment efforts in July 2020. However, HHS and the Department of Defense withheld⁴¹⁹ their contract with Pfizer, a key vaccine developer, for months, and failed to provide all the documents that GAO requested. Political Interference with COVID Scientific Guidance

The Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis opened⁴²⁰ an investigation into political interference with scientific and medical guidance related to the coronavirus pandemic in September 2020. HHS refused to produce any documents for two months, then produced only a fraction of the requested documents with heavy redactions, and cancelled scheduled interviews with agency officials.⁴²¹ Nevertheless, the investigation uncovered evidence that political appointees attempted to block at least 13 CDC reports and pursued a strategy of “herd immunity” that would deliberately allow more Americans to be infected with COVID, which led the Subcommittee to issue subpoenas⁴²² in the final days of the Trump administration for HHS Secretary Azar and CDC Director Redfield to produce all responsive documents. Department of the Interior

Bears Ears Monument

In December 2017, President Trump ordered⁴²⁷ major reductions in the size of two national monuments in Utah, Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante. In a 2019 investigation of this decision by the House Committee on Natural Resources, the Interior Department responded to Committee requests for relevant documents by providing nonresponsive documents. At a hearing with Interior Secretary Bernhardt⁴²⁸ in May 2019, the Committee reported that the agency's initial document production included 100 pages⁴²⁹ of unintelligible symbols⁴³⁰ called "wingdings." In a subsequent hearing⁴³¹ in September 2019 on the Department's compliance with oversight requests, Rep. Deb Haaland disclosed that the Department provided the Committee nearly 18,000 pages of emails that were not responsive to

Bureau of Land Management Relocation

In response to the Interior Department’s decision to relocate the headquarters of the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) from Washington, D.C., to Grand Junction, Colorado, the House Committee on Natural Resources held a hearing about the decision that left the Committee with many unanswered questions.⁴³⁴ A few weeks after the hearing, in September 2019, Natural Resources Committee Chair Raul Grijalva requested⁴³⁵ relevant documents, including a cost-benefit analysis, formal documentation of tribal consultation, an analysis of the effect on staff, and a disparate impact analysis. After receiving only high-level, duplicative, and irrelevant documents in response, Chair Grijalva sent four follow-up letters⁴³⁶ reiterating his requests.

In February 2020, a day before a Committee vote to authorize the chair to issue subpoenas, the Interior Department provided more than a thousand hard-copy documents, but these did not include⁴³⁷ the analyses sought by the Committee. More than a third of the production consisted of printouts of spreadsheets that could not be reconstructed. Many of the materials were completely unrelated, including information on wild horse management and grazing. Even after the move was completed, Interior still refused⁴³⁸ to provide some key personnel data. A GAO report later found⁴³⁹ that the process

Lafayette Square

After peaceful protestors were violently cleared from Lafayette Square in Washington, D.C., in June 2020, the House Natural Resources Committee requested a briefing from the Interior Department about the role of the U.S. Park Police in the incident. The Interior Secretary provided an unsatisfactory response,⁴⁴¹ one that the Committee asserted contradicted video evidence of the incident. When Interior officials eventually agreed to testify before the Committee, they gave conflicting explanations of the Park Police's role, including why radio transmissions were not recorded, how audible warnings to the crowd were transmitted, and the reasons behind the aggressive actions taken against protestors to clear the area. The Committee wrote⁴⁴² to the Interior Department seeking additional information and requesting documents, most of which the Trump Administration failed to produce.

Development Project at Villages of Vigneto

In July 2019, the House Committee on Natural Resources requested⁴⁴³ documents related to Interior's decision to approve a Clean Water Act permit for the Villages at Vigneto development in Benson, Arizona, after reports⁴⁴⁴ that political pressure from a Trump donor overrode experts' concerns that the development would harm the nearby San Pedro Riparian National Conservation Area. Failure to Disclose the Secretary's Calendar

In February 2019, the House Natural Resources Committee requested⁴⁴⁷ all calendars and schedules for then Acting Interior Secretary Bernhardt when Freedom of Information Act requests failed to provide information on the topic or attendees of meetings. After Mr. Bernhardt claimed⁴⁴⁸ that he did not personally maintain a calendar, the House Natural Resources Committee and the House Oversight Committee wrote⁴⁴⁹ a joint letter seeking interviews with the individuals involved in maintaining the Secretary's schedule. The Department blocked the Committees' access to the individuals until the Oversight Committee advised⁴⁵⁰ the agency that the responsible officials could have their salaries withheld for violating federal law. When five versions of Mr. Bernhardt's calendar were released during Senate consideration of his confirmation, they contained⁴⁵¹ contradictions and conflicting information. The calendars also failed to disclose a meeting⁴⁵² between Mr. Bernhardt and the developer of the Villages at Vigneto (see above), which suggests that the calendars produced were incomplete.

Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement

After news reports in 2018 that the Director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement, Scott Angelle, favored the oil industry and encouraged industry leaders to call his cell phone to avoid public records laws, the ranking member of the House Committee on Natural Resources requested⁴⁵³ Mr. Angelle's phone records. After the ranking member became the committee chairman in 2019, he renewed the request⁴⁵⁴ in March 2019. The Department provided a list of phone numbers with many redactions, but simultaneously released an unredacted phone record in response to a FOIA request that listed five times as many calls for the same time period. When questioned about the disparity at a Committee hearing,⁴⁵⁵ the Department of Interior's Deputy Solicitor could provide no explanation for the incomplete response to Congress. Following a March 2020 hearing in which Mr. Angelle testified, the Committee sought additional information in questions for the record, including any information about Mr. Angelle's role in pressuring career staff to make an offshore drilling safety rule more industry-friendly. It took nine months for the Department to respond⁴⁵⁶ to this request, which it did by flooding the Committee with 38 boxes of documents, the vast majority of which were already publicly available.

Boundary Waters Mining Leases

In 2018, the Trump Administration renewed⁴⁵⁷ mineral leases that allowed mining activities in the Boundary Waters, one of the most visited wilderness areas in the country. In March 2019, the House Natural Resources Committee requested documents from the Department of Interior explaining the decision. The Department produced more than 10,000 pages of documents, most of them irrelevant. As the Committee revealed at a hearing on the Department's failure to comply with oversight requests,⁴⁵⁸ a third of the documents were duplicates, and the production included pages that were entirely redacted, several pages of computer code, irrelevant documents on the long-term storage of nuclear waste, a 934-

Cancellation of Study of Human Health Effects of Coal Mining

In early 2019, the Department of Interior abruptly canceled⁴⁶⁰ a National Academy of Science, Engineering, and Medicine study on the potential human health effects of surface coal mining operations in Central Appalachia. In February, the House Natural Resources Committee requested an explanation for this decision. In May, the Department produced 47 heavily redacted pages in response to the request. In June, the Committee requested the unredacted documents. In September, the Department produced 329 documents totaling more than 3,000 pages, 90 percent of which were unrelated to the decision to cancel the study. In some cases, the entire document was redacted. At a hearing on congressional oversight,⁴⁶¹ the Deputy Solicitor of the Department called the production “unacceptable.”

Department of Interior’s Freedom of Information Act Policies

In March 2019, in response to reports that the Interior Department was issuing internal guidance to curtail information released to the public and a proposed rule that would increase response times and limit public information requests, the House Natural Resources and Oversight and Reform Committees requested⁴⁶² information about the recent changes to the Department’s FOIA policies. The Department of Interior sent the Committees a production of 12,575 pages in response. An Oversight Committee analysis⁴⁶³ showed that 12,320 of these pages were a spreadsheet of the Department’s annual FOIA report, which was already available online, and the remaining documents were also already public

Four Refusals to Cooperate with GAO Investigations

The Department of Interior refused to respond to or cooperate with four GAO investigations and legal opinions. First, a GAO investigation requested in 2017 was frustrated when the Interior Department refused to provide a legal opinion⁴⁶⁵ to GAO on whether tens of millions of dollars were improperly spent by the Bureau of Reclamation as part of an undisclosed plan to subsidize several California water districts formerly represented by Secretary Bernhardt.

Second, GAO was unable to reach a legal opinion⁴⁶⁶ in 2018 on whether Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke had improperly lobbied Alaska's senators because the Department refused to provide any detailed information about their communication.

Third, the Department failed to respond⁴⁶⁷ to GAO's request for an explanation of its movement of funds during the December 2018-January 2019 government shutdown, which GAO concluded was illegal.

Finally, GAO was unable to reach a legal opinion⁴⁶⁸ about the National Park Service's operation of the Old Post Office Building during the same government shutdown because of Interior's failure to respond to its requests for information.

Refusal to Appear at Remote Hearings

Department of Justice

Political Interference in Criminal Cases

In February 2020, the House Judiciary Committee wrote⁴⁷⁰ Attorney General William Barr to request documents and interviews with Justice Department officials regarding the Attorney General's reduction of the sentencing recommendation for Roger Stone, a Trump campaign advisor, and other examples of political interference in criminal cases. After the Department failed to respond, the Committee requested⁴⁷¹ investigations by the Inspector General for the Justice Department into the Roger Stone case, the Attorney General's decision to dismiss the criminal case against Michael Flynn, President Trump's first National Security Advisor, and other examples of political interference. Committee Chairman Jerrold Nadler subsequently introduced legislation⁴⁷² to slash the budget of the Attorney General due in part to his failure to respond to the Committee's request.

The Attorney General's Refusal to Testify

In April 2019, reports emerged⁴⁷³ that Special Counsel Robert Mueller had written to Attorney General William Barr expressing concern that Mr. Barr's memo summarizing the Special Counsel's Russia investigation "did not fully capture the context, nature, and substance of this Office's work and conclusions" and urging Mr. Barr to release the full content of the Special Counsel's report. When the House Judiciary Committee sought to convene a hearing to review the Special Counsel findings and the Attorney General's role in their release, Mr. Barr refused to testify⁴⁷⁴ after the Committee informed him he would face 60 minutes of questioning from staff counsel in addition to questioning from Committee members. House rules have long provided⁴⁷⁵ committees authority to designate counsel for witness questioning at hearings, so this refusal established new precedent.

Role in Citizenship Question

In 2018, the Census Bureau announced plans⁴⁷⁶ to add a question on citizenship to the 2020 Census, despite research from its own experts indicating that the question would likely reduce responses from households with noncitizens and lead to higher costs and a less accurate count. The House Committee on Oversight and Reform investigated the Justice Department's role in this decision after reports⁴⁷⁷ emerged that John Gore, the principal deputy attorney general for the Civil Rights Division, had pressured the Commerce Department to add the citizenship question. After Mr. Gore refused⁴⁷⁸ to answer more than 150 questions during a transcribed interview in March 2019, the Committee issued a subpoena for his deposition testimony. The Trump Administration took the position⁴⁷⁹ that the congressional rule prohibiting agency counsel to attend congressional depositions of agency officials "unconstitutionally interferes with the President's right to control the disclosure of privileged information." Citing this position, Attorney General William Barr instructed⁴⁸⁰ Mr. Gore in April 2019 to refuse to comply with the subpoena. The Trump Administration was the first to use these concerns to justify defiance of a congressional subpoena for deposition testimony. Several subsequent attempts by the Committee to obtain⁴⁸¹ Mr. Gore's deposition testimony failed for the same reason.

A related dispute over document production is discussed in the section on the Commerce Department.

Violations of Whistleblower Rights

In 2017, the chair and ranking member of the House Committee on Oversight and Reform Subcommittee on Government Operations sent bipartisan requests⁴⁸² to multiple federal agencies, including the Justice Department, requesting information on reports that employees were being instructed to sign nondisclosure agreements that may violate their rights under the Whistleblower Protection Act. The Justice Department ignored multiple bipartisan requests for documents and information on these agreements for more than a year. The Republican chair of the committee at the time, Trey Gowdy, refused⁴⁸³ to issue a subpoena.

Politically Motivated Antitrust Investigations

The House Committee on the Judiciary requested information from the White House and the Department of Justice in 2019 regarding reports that political considerations were influencing the action of the Antitrust Division, such as its opposition to AT&T's acquisition of Time Warner⁴⁸⁴ and its investigation of auto industry support for California's vehicle emission standards.⁴⁸⁵ The White House did not respond to the Committee's requests. The Justice Department denied that these investigations were political but did not provide any of the requested communications with the White House about the antitrust investigations. In 2020, a senior official in the Antitrust Division testified⁴⁸⁶ as a whistleblower about these actions.

Rebuffing Individual Member Requests

In May 2017, the Office of Legal Counsel issued a letter opinion that concluded⁴⁸⁷ that executive branch responses to the requests of individual members are purely “discretionary,” arguing that individual members have no constitutional authority to conduct oversight in the absence of a specific delegation by a full house, committee, or subcommittee.

Department of State

Retaliation Against Career Officials

In March 2018, the ranking members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and House Oversight and Reform Committee requested⁴⁸⁸ documents to investigate allegations that political appointees at the State Department were taking retaliatory personnel actions against career civil servants who were viewed as insufficiently supportive of President Trump. In June 2018, the State Department refused⁴⁸⁹ to comply, citing the ongoing investigations of this matter by the State Department Office of Inspector General and Office of Special Counsel.

In 2019, the request was renewed⁴⁹⁰ by the chair of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee after the State Department acknowledged that it had no legal basis to withhold production of the same documents to private parties under the Freedom of Information Act. The State Department later produced some documents as a condition of securing a nomination hearing⁴⁹¹ for Brian Bulatao to serve as Undersecretary of State for Management.

Subsequently, the Inspector General found in one report⁴⁹² that the Trump State Department had a “negative” and “vindictive” environment in which career staff faced retribution for perceived disloyalty to the Trump Administration’s political preferences and found in a second report⁴⁹³ that Brian Hook, then the Special Representative for Iran, inappropriately retaliated against a senior career official. Nonetheless, the State Department continued to withhold⁴⁹⁴ certain requested documents and refused to make some key witnesses available, including Mr. Hook.

Firing of Inspector General

In May 2020, President Trump abruptly fired⁴⁹⁵ State Department Inspector General Steve Linick and replaced him with a political ally. President Trump took this action after the Inspector General released a critical report⁴⁹⁶ on emergency arms sales to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates and was in the process of investigating⁴⁹⁷ whether Secretary Pompeo was using public funds for his personal benefit, including by instructing State Department staff to carry out personal errands, such as walking his dog, and by hosting lavish dinners for corporate and political allies at taxpayer expense. Cancelled Staff Briefings

The State Department in August 2020 took the retaliatory action of cancelling⁵⁰⁵ staff-level briefings for the House Foreign Affairs Committee because of the Committee's investigation into the firing of former State Department Inspector General Steve Linick. The cancelled briefings concerned foreign policy and national security matters that had no relation to the inspector general firing, including counterterrorism efforts in Mali, the Islamic State's takeover of a port in Mozambique, and the closure of a consulate in China.

Burisma

In May 2020, as part of an inquiry into whether the State Department was misusing official resources for partisan purposes, House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Eliot Engel requested⁵⁰⁶ that the State Department produce documents regarding the family of then-presidential candidate Joe Biden and the Ukrainian energy company Burisma. The State Department had previously provided these documents to the Republican-chaired Senate Committee on Finance and Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs. The Department declined to provide these documents, and it continued to refuse to provide them after the Committee issued a subpoena⁵⁰⁷ for them on July 31, 2020. It was only after Chairman Engel threatened to hold Secretary of State Pompeo in contempt that the Department ultimately provided⁵⁰⁸ some of the subpoenaed documents.

Misuse of Official Resources

The House Foreign Affairs Committee investigated Secretary of State Mike Pompeo for participating virtually in the Republican National Convention⁵⁰⁹ while on an official trip to Jerusalem and using taxpayer funds to travel the country⁵¹⁰ delivering political speeches in the weeks preceding the 2020 election, despite State Department legal guidance prohibiting political appointees from even attending partisan events. The State Department did not provide any documents to the Committee, which prompted the Committee to issue another request for documents⁵¹¹ in November 2020. The Biden Administration later provided documents pursuant to this inquiry.

North Korea

As President Trump engaged North Korean leader Kim Jong-un in nuclear negotiations, the Trump Administration cut off congressional committees' access to intelligence regarding North Korea's nuclear and conventional weapons, refused to brief senior-level staff on the committees of jurisdiction, and failed to produce a required report to Congress on the status of North Korea's nuclear program. The Chairs of the House Committees on Foreign Affairs, Armed Services, and Intelligence wrote⁵¹² to insist that Congress be fully briefed and that the Administration submit a report to Congress as required by the 2019 National Defense Authorization Act. Despite the letter, the flow of information about North Korea remained restricted. Blocking or restricting access to intelligence analysis due to concerns it would contradict policymaker statements politicizes the intelligence community.

Afghanistan Negotiations

During peace talks between the Taliban, the Afghan government, and the U.S., the State Department repeatedly refused⁵¹³ to make the U.S.'s top negotiator, Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad, available to brief members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Sidelining Diplomats During Trip to Saudi Arabia

After senior White House aide Jared Kushner traveled to Saudi Arabia in February 2019 without involving diplomats at the U.S. Embassy in the planning or execution of sensitive meetings, House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Eliot Engel wrote⁵¹⁷ to Secretary of State Mike Pompeo to request a briefing and documents on the trip and an explanation of why an official visit from a White House aide was conducted without oversight or support from State Department diplomats. The State Department failed to provide the bulk of the requested documents beyond a small production that lacked sufficient details responsive to the request.

WHO Defunding

In April 2020, President Trump announced⁵¹⁸ his intention to cut off funds to the World Health Organization (WHO), criticizing the organization's pandemic response in an attempt to deflect blame from his own administration's handling of the crisis. Medical experts decried the decision, saying that it would undermine international cooperation and research needed to bring the pandemic under control. In response, House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Eliot Engel requested⁵¹⁹ documents from the State Department explaining the administration's process and justification for reaching this decision. The State Department failed to produce any relevant documents.

Refusal to Testify at Virtual Hearings

In June 2020, the State Department and the U.S. Agency for International Development, joined by the Departments of Defense and Homeland Security, announced plans to implement the U.S. Strategy on Women, Peace, and Security.⁵²² The announcement occurred a few months into the COVID-19 pandemic, when House and Senate committees were regularly conducting hearings remotely. The Administration refused⁵²³ a House Committee on Oversight and Reform Subcommittee on National Security request for testimony on the strategy from representatives of these agencies, citing White House guidance providing that agency officials will not testify unless the committee chairman and witnesses appear in person. In October 2018, Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi, who had been living in Washington, D.C., and writing for the Washington Post, was killed and dismembered⁵²⁹ by Saudi agents when he entered the Saudi consulate in Istanbul, Turkey. After President Trump refused⁵³⁰ to demand a U.S. investigation of the matter, Congress in December 2019 enacted provisions in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2020 (§ 1277⁵³¹ § 5714⁵³²) requiring the DNI to release an unclassified report on the murder within 30 days. The Trump Administration ignored the law, providing only a classified report in February 2020. In separate letters, the Chairman of the House Intelligence Committee and the bipartisan leaders of the Senate Intelligence Committee demanded⁵³³ that the DNI declassify the key information and comply with the law, but the Trump Administration refused. Intelligence Briefings

The Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 requires that the Director of National Intelligence “fully and completely inform” Congress on intelligence matters. In August 2020, however, the Director’s office halted⁵³⁵ its long-standing practice of providing in-person briefings, stating that briefings on election security would only occur in writing. This abrupt change came after a top intelligence official warned publicly that foreign adversaries like Russia could seek to compromise election security and undermine confidence in the democratic process. provide these analyses, and materials that were provided to the committee had substantive legal discussions redacted. President Trump ultimately dropped⁵⁶⁷ the plan after facing bipartisan pushback from Congress.

National Labor Relations Board

Conflicts of Interest

When President Trump appointed William Emanuel to the NLRB in 2017, labor advocates argued⁵⁶⁸ that Mr. Emanuel should recuse himself from a dispute the NLRB was reviewing between McDonald's and union workers because of his prior work for a law firm that had assisted McDonald's franchisees in handling worker complaints. The House Education and Labor Committee launched an inquiry⁵⁶⁹ into ethics compliance at NLRB, requesting relevant NLRB documents that included determinations by NLRB ethics officers. After a year of NLRB noncooperation, the Chair of the Committee issued a subpoena⁵⁷⁰ for these documents. The NLRB refused⁵⁷¹ to produce ethics officer memos, claiming they were deliberative and protected by attorney-client privilege.

award of a $500 million contract to manage the emergency injury disaster loan program. The SBA refused⁵⁷³ to produce the requested documents and ignored the Committees' repeated request for a staff briefing on the management of the emergency loan program. A report⁵⁷⁴ by the Select Committee later found that SBA failed to implement basic fraud controls and that the company that received the no-bid contract for the administration of the program was paid $340 million for the work of just six employees.

Paycheck Protection Program

The SBA withheld key information on the Paycheck Protection Program from GAO, preventing its investigation from informing Congress about issues with the program. Months after the launch of the program, the Comptroller General testified⁵⁷⁵ to the Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis, "We still don't know what information [SBA] collected, versus what information the banks and other financial agents have at their offices and control. So we weren't able to do an analysis other than what the data was they provided publicly on their website. ... Secondly, we didn't have access to the key program people ... so while they did make some officials available, they weren't the ones we really wanted to talk to. ... But the data is essential for us. Otherwise we can't tell the Congress specifically what type of companies got this assistance and we can't carry out any potential risk analysis of what the potential may be for inflated applications or even people submitting false information to the government."

U.S. Agency for Global Media

Whistleblower Retaliation

In September 2020, reports emerged that the independent U.S. Agency for Global Media retaliated⁵⁷⁶ against several whistleblowers for raising concerns that CEO Michael Pack had inappropriately politicized the organization, including by withholding congressionally appropriated funds and firing a

The House Foreign Affairs Committee called a hearing to investigate these matters, but Mr. Pack refused to appear and defied⁵⁷⁸ the Committee subpoena for his testimony.

U.S. Postal Service

Selection of Postmaster DeJoy

After President Trump selected major political donor Louis DeJoy to serve as the Postmaster General despite his lack of any Postal Service experience, Senate Minority Leader Charles Schumer requested⁵⁷⁹ documents in June 2020 from the Board of Governors of the USPS regarding its selection of Mr. DeJoy. In July 2020, the Board withheld⁵⁸⁰ documents that it deemed confidential, concluding that the Freedom of Information Act prohibits the disclosure of confidential information to a member of Congress who is not the chair of a committee. In the Board’s view, individual members of Congress are no different from unelected members of the public. Senator Schumer also requested information from the executive search firm, Russell Reynolds Associates, regarding its role in the selection of DeJoy. Russell Reynolds refused⁵⁸¹ to produce this information, claiming it was barred from doing so by a nondisclosure agreement with the Board of Governors of the USPS.

Blocking Member Access to Postal Facilities

Members of Congress sought to visit local postal facilities to investigate the mail delays in the fall of 2020, but the U.S. Postal Service blocked⁵⁸⁵ their access, claiming that the Hatch Act bars tour requests from anyone on a ballot within 45 days of an election. However, this argument had been rejected⁵⁸⁶ two years earlier by the Office of Special Counsel, the nonpartisan agency responsible for enforcing the Act, which stated that the Act does not prohibit members of Congress from visiting federal facilities for an official purpose.
