Learning Targets

Here are some highlights in the skills our learners are working on this month in our academic workshops:

Reading: Establishing Reading Workshop, working on 3 ways to read a book (pictures, pictures and words, words only), connecting with familiar books, building reading stamina

Math: Establishing Math Workshop and working on math workstations and rotating through activities, reviewing and then growing number sense, addition and subtraction strategies, and for some learners, we may work through beginning repeated addition through arrays.

Writing: Establishing Writing Workshop, planning stories, using authors as mentors to help get ideas for what to write, and building phonetic spelling skills relative to writing experience.

Library Volunteer

CSA is looking for volunteers to help run library check-out for classes. This would be a weekly commitment with a morning or afternoon shift. Please email Mrs. Erica Sikma at esikma@csaschool.org for more information!

A note from Mrs. Radloff

I'm so excited to be working with your learner! We've already begun building a classroom community, learning routines, and diving into our first activities together. My goal is to make sure everyone feels safe, supported, and inspired to learn every day.

Thank you for sharing your wonderful students with me—I'm looking forward to all the learning and growth ahead!

Toys From Home

Reminder - students should NOT be bringing any personal items like toys or Pokemon cards to school (with some exceptions including SEP and pre-arranged plans). The only approved time is when they are selected as Star of the Week. All other daily shares are verbal only. Thank you for your support with this!

Character Corner

In this section of our newsletter, we will share information regarding our character education program including character traits, social protocols, emotional language, and related concepts like manners and kind acts. Although we might highlight specific concepts here, we will continue to discuss and practice all components naturally throughout the year. We encourage you to use these ideas and language at home in order to help reinforce and connect it to the classroom!

This month, we'll introduce the six character traits—Respect, Kindness, Responsibility, Getting Along, Work Ethic, and Optimism—during activities like morning meetings and read-alouds. These traits are part of the CSA character program, which helps students focus on qualities that foster positive relationships and develop work skills. In addition, we're practicing social protocols such as introducing yourself, getting someone's attention, and following directions the first time they're given. For example, in the first few weeks, we will emphasize the importance of following directions, incorporating this into our daily routines, morning meetings, and family gatherings. Mastering this protocol is essential for building a strong foundation in work ethic, responsibility, and respect. Students will engage in role-playing to explore both examples and non-examples of following directions, and we'll find connections in our read-alouds. These protocols will guide students as they adapt to new classrooms, friendships, and routines.

Through these program elements, we aim to support CSA's mission of creating a learning environment that allows students to safely grow and learn. To promote this, each classroom includes multiple "safe zones"—designated areas where students can go during moments of big emotions, challenging situations, or reflection. The purpose of these zones is to give students space to process their feelings while staying connected to the classroom community. It's important to note that these are not punishment areas or "time outs." Instead, they empower students to pause, reflect on what may have caused their feelings, and consider ways to move forward. This space is designed to foster self-regulation and a place where students can have the time and space they need to regroup and be ready to learn. While we encourage students to use these areas independently, we might also guide them to spend time there as they learn when and why it could be helpful, and there may be more initial adult guidance with these spaces as students learn how to navigate changes, feelings, and transitions. Eventually, students will learn how to use these spaces independently and Safe Zone visits become quick and lead students back to learning tasks all on their own. We always check in and support each student according to their individual needs to help them return to the group successfully.

Feel free to ask your child about their understanding of the safe zone and whether they've used it recently—it might spark some insightful and impactful conversations!

White Binders

Please make sure to turn in a 1.5 or 2 inch white binder for your student.

This week we talked about the many different feelings we can have at the beginning of a new school year. We read In My Heart: A Book of Feelings and discussed how it's normal to feel a mix of emotions—excited, nervous, happy, or even unsure. We also introduced our classroom Safe Zones, a special space where students can take a moment to check in with their feelings when they need to.

To go along with our lesson, students created watercolor art projects. Each child divided their heart into sections to represent the different feelings they've experienced the first couple days of school and painted each part with watercolors based on those feelings. The hearts are now proudly displayed in both of our classroom Safe Zones, serving as a reminder that all feelings are welcome here.

Below are some pictures of students painting their hearts!
