Quality Work Binder

Part of what makes CSA a unique place to learn and grow is our Quality Work Portfolios. These are simple binders that are made magical by collecting students' quality work and making it theirs to showcase and take with them after their time at CSA.

Throughout each school year, students collect "quality work" or assignments and projects that they have worked hard on.

Voyager is unique in that teachers choose pieces, but students are introduced to selecting pieces they are proud of on their own. Watching students become more independent and reflective of their work brings a sense of ownership to their work as well as their portfolios.

Quality work should be celebrated! We are happy to be a part of creating work that students will carry with them beyond the classroom

High Expectations

Our two core beliefs that all children are inherently good and all children have unlimited potential to learn honor each child by ensuring that our individualized expectations are gauged appropriately. At CSA, implementing high expectations requires purposeful and thoughtful approaches to climate, input, response opportunities, feedback, and relational connections. This, in turn, requires an intentional focus on strong and deliberate modeling. To be effective, our high expectations must be collaborative and spread beyond those we have of our students, extending throughout our community and internally within ourselves as well!

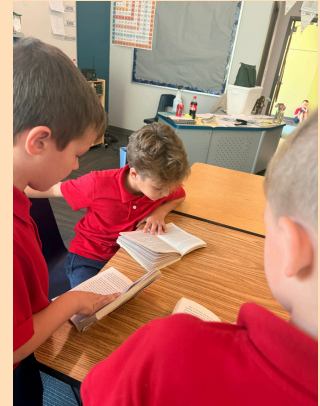

Character Corner

As we begin to spend more class time on academics and our expectations during academic learning times, we have reinforced with students the concepts of work ethic and responsibility, while providing students with a choice in their academic work. As Voyager students, we want students to begin to develop an independence that comes with making their own choices to further their learning while also allowing them to show responsibility in completing their work on their own. This skill will be revisited many times throughout the year as we continue to build their independence!

Parent Partnership

Please be sure to continue to send students to school with peanut and tree nut free food!! This is incredibly important this year.

Reminder that there is absolutely no smart watches or phones aloud in school. All communication must go through the office or through teachers. We appreciate the understanding and partnership with us.
