

Essay Introduction Examples

1. General academic essay

College campuses have increased their use of online tools, especially for first-year writing courses. Many students now complete assignments through digital platforms instead of traditional paper submissions. This essay argues that online systems improve the essay writing process by giving students clearer instructions, faster feedback, and a more organized workflow.

2. Argumentative essay

Public transportation costs have risen steadily in the past five years. Cities now face pressure to decide whether fares should continue increasing or remain subsidized. This essay takes the position that keeping fares low supports economic mobility and strengthens access to essential services for low-income residents.

3. Expository essay

Water scarcity affects regions that previously had stable water supplies. Climate data shows sharper seasonal changes, which puts pressure on local governments to adjust their management plans. This essay explains how updated storage systems, improved monitoring, and revised distribution rules can reduce these shortages.

4. Literary analysis

In The Great Gatsby, F. Scott Fitzgerald presents wealth as a force that shapes personal identity. Several characters show patterns of ambition and self-reinvention tied to their social status. This essay examines how the novel uses setting, dialogue, and symbolism to reveal the limits of that reinvention.

5. Research-based essay

High school students spend more time on independent work than they did a decade ago. Surveys show increases in assigned reading, digital tasks, and long-term projects. This essay analyzes how these changes affect student performance by comparing completion rates, stress levels, and self-reported learning outcomes across grade levels.
