You make different words.
You like different things.
I'm C ... And I'm K!
And I think that I can say...
you're not me!

'c, k, c,' hear it in the air.
'k, c, k,' is the sound we share,
but we use it in very different ways.
And maybe that's... OK!

We like different things!
We make different words!
We both sound the same, yes,
but now we have heard,

there's room for us both
and we finally see
In spite of our differences
we can agree...
You're not me!
