PRESS RELEASE

No more exports: travel agencies now track their business from a dashboard built into Ezus

Requests, conversion, signed revenue and upcoming departures on one screen, already set up when the account opens.

Paris, 16 November 2026

Ezus, the management software for travel agencies, DMCs and tour operators, is launching a new dashboard. Teams choose a period and a scope, their own projects or the whole team, and see the agency's key indicators on a single screen: new requests, open pipeline, conversion rate, signed revenue, upcoming departures and seasonality. The dashboard is set up by default and available to all Ezus customers.

In a bespoke travel agency, the figures that matter to a director are scattered. How many requests came in this quarter, how many were signed, how many travellers leave next month: answering usually means exporting the project list to Excel, adding the archived projects, then redoing the calculation by hand. The figure arrives late, and often only once a month.

Key indicators from the first screen

The dashboard opens from the Ezus icon. Period filters run from the current month to the full year, or a custom period. It shows new requests compared with the previous year, open pipeline, the conversion rate of signed against lost projects, signed revenue, average booking lead time, upcoming departures and travellers currently on the road. A seasonality view shows departures month by month over three years.

A view each user composes

Widgets can be added, moved, resized or removed, and the layout is saved. A director can keep a sales view, while an operations manager focuses on departures and travellers.

Four detailed views

A Statistics section goes further, object by object: projects, clients, suppliers and products, and finance. Each view offers more detailed widgets that users activate on their own account, and that can also be displayed on the main dashboard.

Custom widgets

When an indicator is missing, users create their own widget: one measure, one or two breakdowns and filters, described in a single sentence. The widget then joins the others on the dashboard.

> “An agency director wants to know where the business stands without waiting for an export or the end of the month. That information was already in Ezus, project by project. The dashboard brings it together on one screen, set up from day one, and each team can then shape it to the way it runs the agency.”
