Our strategic questions are the complex, interconnected challenges we must address together to become the school we aspire to be.

- 1. What outcomes should City Garden hold itself most accountable to, and how do we make sure we are measuring them in ways that both reflect the whole child and help close racial and economic gaps?
  - 2. How can we clarify and codify City Garden's multifaceted model so that everyone understands what to expect, embraces the trade-offs, and uses it to guide consistent decisions and practices?
- 3. How do we build and sustain a team inclusive of staff, leaders, and board that embodies our values and has the systems, skills, and mindsets needed to implement our model with clarity, consistency, and accountability?

Phases 2-4: Process Recap

Phase 2 (June-August) Understanding Current State

Overview

- City Garden has reached an organizational inflection point, with growing alignment that the path forward is about depth over breadth, focusing on quality, clarity, and coherence rather than expansion.
  Across research and community engagement, the message is clear: City Garden must deepen instructional coherence, clarify its model, and strengthen systems for organizational learning, accountability and support while protecting the relationships and moral purpose at its core.
- In this next phase, the school's challenge is to translate strong alignment on mission & values into practice. City Garden must turn vision into evidence—to demonstrate through results that a model grounded in belonging and collective humanity can also close gaps and achieve excellence for every student.
- To do this, City Garden will need to reduce stressors and strengthen stability wherever possible, so adults can learn, grow, and implement the model with consistency. This phase is about becoming a true learning organization—investing in staff development, building coherent systems, and integrating academics and SEL in reinforcing ways to deepen impact and demonstrate excellence and equity.

Outcomes That Matter

#1: Building Data Literacy

There is widespread agreement that City Garden must strengthen its capacity in terms of both skill and mindset to measure whole-student outcomes and build a learning culture around data, using the rich data it already collects to generate insights that drive more focused action around student success.

Outcomes That Matter

#2: Central Role of SEL

Stakeholders view SEL as the foundation of City Garden's model and a key driver of long-term student success. To move from aspiration to shared accountability, City Garden must formalize how SEL is defined, measured, and integrated into all aspects of student experience, selecting a small but meaningful set of indicators that both align with its whole-child mission and help to predict academic growth. Early research from SLU shows that self-management—students' ability to focus, follow directions, and stay prepared—is most strongly linked to academic success at City Garden. Self-efficacy is another significant SEL metric to measure. The key takeaway is that SEL should carry significant weight on the school's scorecard, with specific, measurable competencies rather than a single umbrella measure.

#3: Measuring Academic Growth

Academic proficiency alone is not an adequate measure of success. It provides limited context on student growth and is less actionable for understanding instructional effectiveness. Achievement gaps reflect broader systemic inequities, not only causes internal to City Garden. For both the school's purposes and for deliberate acceleration of student achievement where outcomes are currently lowest, growth is a more meaningful indicator of impact, showing how effective instruction, high expectations and support help all students, especially those furthest behind, make meaningful progress over time.

Our Model in Practice

#1: Strengthening the Integrated Learning Model

Montessori practice and leveraging intentional diversity simultaneously contributes to academic and social-emotional growth. To realize this fully, the school must codify a strong Tier I instruction where SEL and academics are intentionally woven together—providing rigorous content while building self-awareness, collaboration, and empathy. Prioritizing strong, integrated core teaching preserves the proven benefits of diversity, deepens learning for all students, and stays true to City Garden's whole-child mission.

Our Model in Practice

#2: Opting In to Equity

Living our values means making intentional choices. In service of our commitment to equity, City Garden will at times direct more resources and attention to students with the greatest needs. This understanding must be shared by all families, especially those with greater access to resources. To fulfill our promise of belonging and excellence for every child, the school is choosing to prioritize closing gaps in opportunity over adding enhancements or experiences that do not advance equity.

#3: Bold Visions Require Deep & Sustained Work

City Garden's vision reaches beyond traditional schooling; it calls on adults and students alike to develop the consciousness, skills and relationships needed to contribute meaningfully to the community. It rests on a belief that stakeholders and the school are mutually invested in one another – through shared ownership, a willingness to grow and consistent participation. The success of this model depends on both commitment and continuity: retaining staff and students, sustaining relationships over time, and maintaining stable structures that support individual growth, community cohesion and institutional sustainability.

Building Our Capacity

#1: Culture - Growth & Learning as Daily Practice

City Garden's next stage of growth depends on deepening a culture where reflection, feedback and continuous learning are systematized and practiced as everyday habits. Adults must feel both supported and challenged, with feedback and data used as tools for growth rather than judgment. Having a culture of high psychological safety and high standards will stem from normalizing learning, and reinforcing curiosity, self-awareness, and accountability as shared values.

Building Our Capacity

#2: People - Developing the Adults Who Deliver the Model

For City Garden's model to thrive, adults need both the technical skills to deliver high-quality instruction and the social-emotional capacity to sustain the work. From the start, expectations must be clear and explicit about what the model demands, so new hires understand the skills and mindsets they will need to grow toward over time. Development should then be supported through a clearly articulated professional development arc and systems that reinforce those same skills in daily practice. Together, these structures build the alignment, capacity, and consistency needed for the model to reach its full potential.

#3: Systems - Clarity that Frees us To Focus on What Matters Most

City Garden stands at a point where systems must bring coherence and support outcomes, without compromising the school's soul. The truth is, City Garden's work is already hard – but we can choose our hard. The lack of clarity and consistency in current systems is making work harder than it needs to be, creating confusion, duplication and strain. The opportunity ahead is to build systems that serve the work, not stifle it – to anticipate needs, streamline and deliberately design around what matters most. When done well, structure reflects our values, builds trust, and creates the clarity and stability that allow deeper learning to thrive.

Understanding Achievement Gaps at City Garden Montessori School

November 2025

Impetus for our analysis: Why now?

We are at an important inflection point as a school.

City Garden was founded to expand access to excellent education and disrupt historical inequities so that all children can realize their full potential. While we have made progress, persistent student outcome gaps show that we are not yet consistently delivering on this promise. We are committed to identifying what it will take to fulfill our vision.

Strategic Planning (June 2025-February 2026)

This year, school leadership launched a strategic planning process focused on the future of the school. This process seeks to answer three essential questions: 1) What outcomes really matter, and how will we hold ourselves accountable for them? 2) How do we make sure our public ABAR Montessori model is clear, communicated effectively and practiced consistently to support every child? 3) And how do we build the capacity in our people, systems, and resources needed to sustain this vision?

Board Priority on Academic Outcomes & Whole Child Success (Fall 2025)

Concurrent with the strategic planning process, the Board set a shorter-term learning goal to:

- Accelerate data analysis and learning to understand root causes and identify real-time improvements
- Strengthen Board visibility into current student outcomes and persistent achievement gaps

This document summarizes early findings from both workstreams - insights that are shaping the strategic plan's recommendations for 2026 and beyond. Ultimately, our commitment is to not only plan for the future, but also to take responsibility for measurable impact now.

What are Achievement Gaps?

- Since its inception as a charter school in 2008, City Garden Montessori has shown strong academic outcomes relative to other Pk-8 schools in St. Louis.
- However, disparities in academic outcomes have always existed. These disparities are often referred to as "achievement gaps," "education gaps," or "opportunity gaps."
- Achievement gaps exist in schools and districts across the United States. These gaps show disparities in outcomes between economically disadvantaged, or Free and Reduced Lunch (FRL) eligible, students and non-economically disadvantaged, or Non-FRL, students, and between Students of Color and White students.
- Achievement gaps have nothing to do with children's intelligence or capabilities—they are a product of longstanding racial and economic inequities in our country.

What Do Test Scores Tell Us?

While test scores are only one part of a student's profile as a learner, the persistent achievement gaps in the US have tremendous impacts on students' life outcomes. Students who score in the lowest quartile, or "Below Basic," on standardized tests in elementary school have almost zero chance of attending and graduating from college and only a 62% chance of graduating from high school

The Systemic Nature of Inequity

- Poverty, housing instability, systemic racism, disabilities and other macro level societal problems directly impact student achievement, wellbeing and overall success.
- At City Garden, we have implemented a number of things to help remediate the impacts of systemic inequities, including ensuring families have access to food, clothing, shelter and transportation and connecting students and families to social, health and mental health resources.

Poverty & Instability

Unstable housing, food insecurity, and economic hardship create daily challenges for learning

Systemic Racism

Historical and ongoing discrimination creates barriers to educational opportunity

Childhood Trauma

Adverse experiences affect students' ability to engage and thrive academically

COVID-19 Impact

The pandemic disrupted learning and widened existing achievement gaps

City Garden Montessori School - Board Meeting - Agenda - Tuesday November 18, 2025 at 5:00 PM City Garden's Focus on Access to Holistic Public Montessori Education

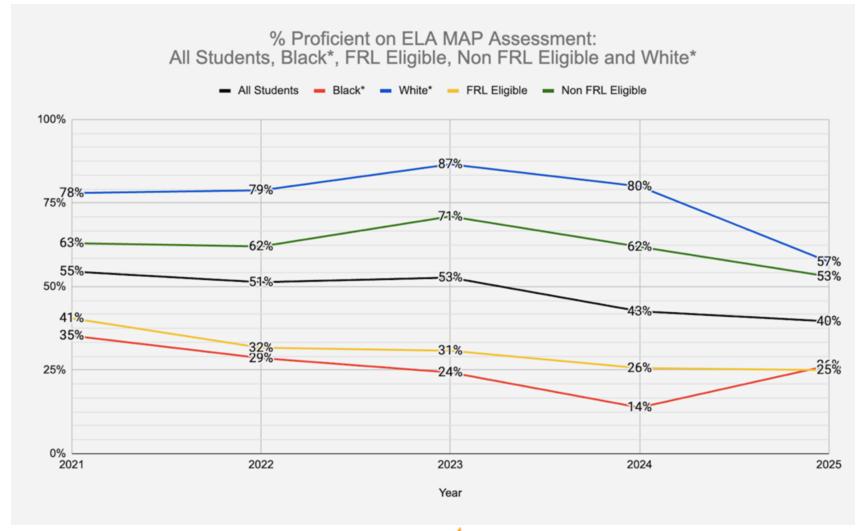

City Garden believes all students deserve access to a holistic, excellent education. We have worked to ensure access to these things by:

- Creating a high-quality Montessori Preschool-8th grade school that is free and accessible to families of all economic backgrounds
- Reducing barriers to accessing early childhood education through scholarships and sliding scale tuition
- Fostering a sense of belonging, safety and understanding among our racially and socioeconomically diverse school community and working to disrupt historic segregation
- Advocating for legislative changes that prioritize enrollment preferences for FRL families and that increase funding for charter schools and for early childhood education
- Raising funds to cover the gap between public funds and the cost of our program
- Launching a Montessori teacher education program to increase access to Montessori training and sponsoring staff to obtain state certification and Montessori certification
- Building beautiful and well equipped child and teacher centered Montessori facilities

Ensuring access has been and will continue to be important. However, access alone has not reversed inequities—achievement gaps still exist at City Garden and overall outcomes have decreased.

Achievement Gapwhare Reminister Work 18 Times in ELA and Overall Proficiency Has Declined, Though We Saw a Notable Increase in Black Student Proficiency between 2024 and 2025

Math Proficiency Michigan Math Proficiency Saw a Notable Increase in Black Student Proficiency between 2024 and 2025

City Garden Population Growth

City Garden's student population grew from 275 to 580 students from 2021 to 2025, increasing from 99 to 250 test takers in grades 3-8

What's Needed Now?

City Garden exists to redefine education by developing the whole child
in an excellent, inclusive,
Montessori school;
to reimagine community
by creating spaces and systems that help to restore our collective humanity; and to reinvigorate our world by creating a culture in which individuals and communities thrive without disparities or barriers to success.

- These persistent gaps require us to pause, examine our approaches, and reflect on what we must do to change this trajectory.
- This can be difficult, because our organization is deeply committed to equity, and we have put a lot of effort into working toward that end for many years.
- However, our mission calls us to take a clear-eyed look at our data, dig deeper to better understand what works, what doesn't, and develop clearer strategies and approaches to ensure equitable student growth, so that we can fulfill our commitment to unleashing every child's full potential.

What Does the Research Say?

Over the past few months, we have been working to:

- review what research in the field says about achievement gaps
- understand outcomes and approaches at other public Montessori schools
- delve deeper into our student data to understand correlations between academic performance and other factors
- examine our structures, systems and approaches to better understand what, within our locus of control, is helping or hindering our students who are most vulnerable and who are not yet performing at grade level.

Key Research Insights from the Literature

- Differences in educational achievement by race are universal in America; only the extent of the difference varies by school district and metropolitan area. Between the 1960's and 1980's, primarily because of desegregation in southern states, achievement gaps declined greatly. Since then, there has been little progress in closing these gaps.
- The voluminous literature on achievements gaps notes the following facts:
  - Achievement gaps are primarily class based, reflecting income and educational level of parents. There is, however, a residual effect of race.
  - Large achievement gaps occur in very early grades and tend to be consistent over time.
  - Areas with very high achievement gaps, like St. Louis City, tend to have large racial differences in parent income and high degrees of geographic racial segregation.
  - Achievement gaps are largest in regions where Black and Hispanic students overwhelmingly attend high poverty schools.
  - Gaps also tend to be larger in higher income areas, with particularly large gaps in certain University-adjacent towns where white parents may be particularly focused on education (i.e. Evanston, IL and Berkeley, CA).
  - Achievement gaps are smallest in areas of poor white achievement and high rates of white poverty.

Coherence: A Critical Condition for Success

Program coherence is essential for success.

Successful schools are coherent. They have a set of values and a curriculum that is known to all and applied rigorously. The adults in the building are a team dedicated to student success. Teachers in different classrooms serving similar age students are teaching the same material, building on prior year learnings and setting the basis for what students will learn the next year. Data and interviews with stakeholders suggest that City Garden needs to build coherence.

What does the research say about Montessori?

- Strengths: Evidence suggests that the Montessori method is more effective than alternatives at achieving student outcomes. Even more important is how Montessori methods support the best predictors of adult success. While the literature varies, most studies say that adult success is a result of social and emotional skills, grit, agency and competency. Montessori, far more than most models, is focused on social and emotional skills and agency.
- Challenges: City Garden, along many other public Montessori schools, has weaker Math than English Language Arts scores. This deserves additional attention, examining Montessori math curriculum to better understand what shifts may be needed to align with state standards and assessments. Other successful project-based schools also struggle with math achievement (i.e. Big Picture Schools). As in all areas of education, math success depends on having a coherent curriculum and making sure it is implemented as designed. As we've engaged other promising schools and leaders in the public Montessori sector, the completeness of Montessori curriculum has been cited as an an opportunity area.

Looking Within: Correlations in our student data

- SLU's PRiME Center conducted descriptive analyses and ran pairwise correlations to highlight relationships between academic outcomes and measures of SEL, climate, and attendance. These correlations provide a starting point for further analysis to be conducted during Phase Two of the research support cycle.
- How to Interpret Correlations: Correlation coefficients range from -1 to +1.
  - Positive correlations (closer to +1) indicate that as one measure increases, so does the other.
  - Negative correlations (closer to -1) indicate that as one measure increases, the other decreases.
  - Correlations near zero suggest little to no linear relationship.
  - A correlation of (+ or -) 0.7 to 1 is generally considered high, and a correlation of (+ or -) 0.3 to 0.6 is generally considered moderate. Depending on the metric, you may want to explore further analysis on correlations closer to zero.

Connections between iReady & Other Measures

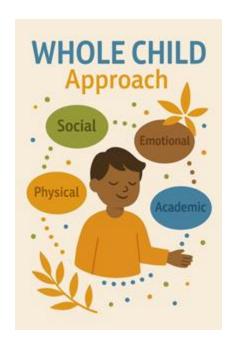

- Moderate correlations with MAP Scale Scores (r = 0.59) and Panorama Academic Measures (ranging from 0.69 to 0.78).
- Small-to-moderate positive correlations with SEL indicators, such as Self-Management (r = 0.39) and Number of Strengths (r = 0.28).
- Weak or negligible relationships with Attendance measures, indicating that attendance alone may not directly predict i-Ready performance in this dataset.
- The overall correlation between race and iReady performance is small and positive (+0.26). However, slightly different patterns emerge when breaking out by category:

Hispanic	Asian	Black	White	Multiracial
-0.02	0.03	-0.30	0.33	-0.02

Equity & Engagement Patterns

To support City Garden Montessori's focus on equity and whole-child development, PRiME examined how academic and social-emotional outcomes vary by demographic characteristics. These correlations do not imply causation but highlight meaningful patterns for further inquiry.

Selected Correlations:
	Female
SEL Growth Mindset	-0.22
SEL Grit	0.21
SEL Engagement	0.14
	Black
Panorama ELA	-0.42
SEL Grit	-0.32
Percent in Attendance	-0.27
SEL Engagement	-0.21
SEL Growth Mindset	0.15
	White
Panorama ELA	0.50
SEL Engagement	0.38
Percent in Attendance	0.23
SEL Growth Mindset	-0.09
SEL Grit	-0.09

Gender Patterns

- For female students:
  - Growth Mindset showed a small negative correlation (r = -0.22), suggesting that female students self-reported slightly lower confidence in their ability to improve through effort.
  - Grit (r = 0.21) and Engagement (r = 0.14) were modestly positive, indicating somewhat stronger persistence and classroom engagement relative to peers.
- Taken together, female students tend to exhibit solid engagement and perseverance but may benefit from targeted supports to strengthen self-perceptions of growth and efficacy.

Racial Patterns: Academic Identity and SEL Indicators

For Black students:

- Lower correlations were observed with Panorama ELA (r = -0.42), Grit (r = -0.32), and Engagement (r = -0.21).
- Attendance was also somewhat lower (r = -0.27).
- A small positive relationship with Growth Mindset (r = 0.15) suggests optimism about potential for improvement despite lower reported engagement and attendance.
- These findings underscore the importance of continuing to cultivate belonging, consistent attendance, and opportunities that connect academic identity and perseverance for Black students.

For White students:

- Positive correlations emerged across most measures—Panorama ELA (r = 0.50), Engagement (r = 0.38), and Attendance (r = 0.23)—indicating generally higher self-reported engagement and academic performance.
- Growth Mindset (r = -0.09) and Grit (r = -0.09) were slightly negative but not meaningful in magnitude.
- Together, these relationships reflect relatively stable engagement and academic outcomes among White students, though there is room to deepen growth-oriented mindsets across all student groups.

Relationship: i-Ready achievement and Self-Management

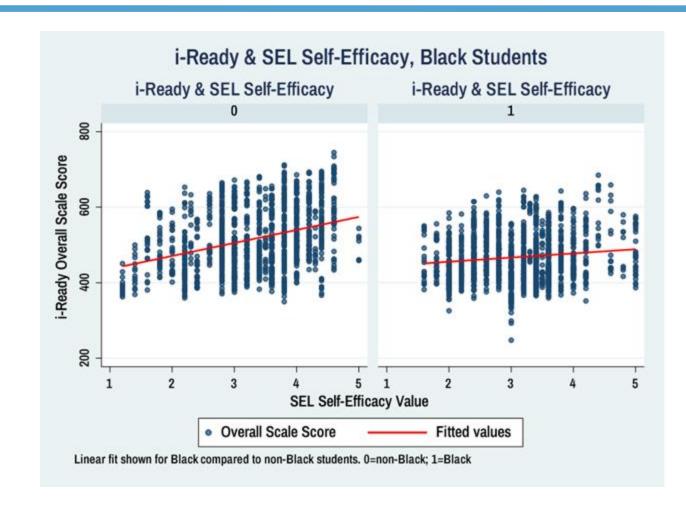

This charts show that as i-Ready scores increase, Self-Management ratings tend to increase as well—though the relationships are modest. For Black students, the correlation appears weaker, suggesting that SEL ratings may not be as strongly linked to achievement measures for this group.

Relationship: i-Ready achievement and Self-Efficacy

This charts show that as i-Ready scores increase, Self-Efficacy ratings tend to increase as well—though the relationships are modest. Again, for Black students, the correlation appears weaker, suggesting that SEL ratings may not be as strongly linked to achievement measures for this group.

How Does Attendance Factor Into Achievement?

- Recent studies of children in the first years of school suggest that early school absences may relate to worsened socioemotional development and later schooling attendance (Gottfried, 2014), making attendance a particularly important metric to monitor closely. The overall rate of attendance for the year 2023-24 was 92.1%. Across both the schools, Elementary Adolescent Education Center (ECAC) had 2% higher attendance than Early Childhood Elementary Center (ECEC). Across City Garden as a whole, grades 1st to 4th had slightly higher attendance on average.
- Comparing across years, attendance rates in 2024–25 showed modest improvement at both campuses, with ECEC demonstrating proportionally greater gains. Strategies emphasizing parental engagement and family partnerships (e.g., parent leadership committees, peer mentoring) have shown promising effects in similar settings (Berger et al., 2021; Brennhofer et al., 2021).

Summary of SLU PRiME Data Analysis

- Overall, these correlations highlight clear patterns aligned with national trends:
  - Engagement and perseverance (grit) show consistent positive relationships with academic measures across all student groups.
  - Attendance remains a modest but important factor linked to achievement and engagement.
  - Equity gaps appear in both academic and SEL indicators, particularly between Black and White students, suggesting that differentiated supports and culturally responsive SEL instruction could strengthen alignment between academic performance, attendance, and selfefficacy.
- These insights will inform the next phase of analysis and help guide City Garden Montessori's strategic planning conversations around equitable academic and social-emotional development.
- Further analysis will examine:
  - Longitudinal growth trends by grade and subgroup,
  - Alignment between i-Ready and MAP growth patterns, and
  - Connections between SEL engagement and academic improvement over time.

Next Steps - PRiME researchers will:

- Finalize summary statistics and subgroup analyses.
- Explore regression models that predict academic growth from SEL and attendance measures.
- Provide visual dashboards highlighting overall trends that can be updated as new data sources are provided.

Enrollment: Has Adding New Students Impacted Achievement?

- One major change that City Garden implemented in recent years is that we began accepting students in grades 3-7. Prior to 2022, students could not enroll after 2nd grade. We changed that policy in an effort to make our program accessible to more students and to back-fill seats when students leave.
- Thus, in recent years, we have had many new students enroll in grades 3-7. These students have tended to be more likely to have IEP's, to be 1 or more grade levels below grade level, and to have intense social-emotional and behavioral needs.
- One question has been: Do new students have an outsized impact on academic data, and therefore achievement gaps?
- Data analyst Steve Cartwright did an analysis, and key findings are on the following slides.

Analysis: New Test-Takers at City Garden

This analysis aims to cover:

- How prevalent are new test-takers at City Garden and who are they?
- How do test scores of new test-takers compare to prior test-takers and how do they compare by student race/ethnicity?
- How does test score growth relate to years at City Garden and how does this vary by student race/ethnicity?

Black and multiracial students are slightly over-represented among new test takers

Percent of New Test Takers at City Garden by Race/Ethnicity

Powered by Board On Track

Thus, while adding new students has been a factor in our overall academic outcomes, this is only one piece of the puzzle

From 2020 to 2025, we have experienced many stressors on our system as a whole.

- Rapid Expansion City Garden grew from 275 to 620 students over five years while simultaneously building people, instructional, and operational systems to support scale
- Higher Student Needs We are serving a significantly higher proportion of students with greater emotional, behavioral, academic, and resource needs
- Crisis Management Ongoing challenges have diverted time and attention, taking a toll on staff, students, leadership, and families
- COVID-19 The pandemic disrupted learning and widened existing achievement gaps
- Talent Pipeline Crisis Teachers and leaders are leaving education at alarming rates while fewer young people enter the profession
- Unfunded Mandates Increasing requirements without corresponding resources strain school systems year after year

These stressors have had real impacts on our students, families and staff.

"Choosing Our Hard"

Part of our ongoing reflection and examination has to be "choosing our hard":

How many stressors can our system withstand, and what are the trade-offs for the decisions we make and the realities we face?

This will be an essential question for City Garden in the coming year and years.

Root Causes: Structural Challenges

Structural Challenges Include:

- Student mobility that destabilizes classrooms higher than desired student attrition (~15% in recent years), which leads to more students being added at older grade levels and after the 1st day of school
- Teacher, leader and staff attrition + a weak talent pool, contributing to continuous "restarts" rather than the ability to continue building upon what is established
- Time constraints not enough time for teachers to plan, prepare and collaborate, with too many "spinning plates" and pulls on the plan time that does exist
- Complexity of our model implementing public ABAR Montessori at City Garden requires an incredible cognitive lift—guides must internalize content for 3 grade bands, differentiate for all students, including those below and above grade level, and ensure each child stays rigorously engaged and on task
- Creating a bridge between students hands-on construction of knowledge and standard assessment practices reflected on State Assessments

Root Causes: Systemic & Technical Challenges

Systems-based and technical challenges include:

- Curricular and instructional systems are still in development, which contributes to a lack consistency across classrooms and creates a heavy day-to-day load for teachers and leaders
- Operational systems and procedures are still in development, meaning that staff spend time and energy on tactical things that take away from instruction
- Insufficient data systems that provide quick, accessible insights for guides and leaders and data fluency skills needed to leverage information for student growth
- Accountability systems are inconsistent and need clarity and further development
- Training and professional development are not fully fleshed out, in alignment with academic goals
- We lack onboarding and orientation systems for prospective and new families to learn about and understand City Garden's ABAR Montessori approach, what the family-school partnership looks like and how to support their children's growth and development
- We lack assessments and screeners for incoming students prior to their arrival, meaning that we are unprepared to meet students' needs on day one, particularly students with special education, SEL, or mental health needs

Root Causes: Adaptive Challenges

Adaptive challenges include:

- An organizational culture that is sometimes reactive rather than strategic, with frequent changes to systems and approaches before allowing time to prove effectiveness.
- An organizational culture that centers relationships, collaboration and humanity but sometimes inadvertently contributes to lowered expectations for students, staff and families.
- There is a "push/pull" between following the child/giving students agency and ensuring they are mastering standards and consistently engaging in rigorous work.
- Some students arrive socialized to advocate for themselves and push toward rigorous work, while others need more encouragement and direction. Without intentional support and consciousness about how time and resources are being allocated, some students can be left unengaged.
- Approaching each child and family holistically and responding to social and emotional needs requires significant time and emotional labor, and there are no easy tradeoffs.
- Anti-bias, antiracism work demands significant individual reflective and emotional work for guides and staff.
- Lack of alignment and lack of clarity—among leadership, staff and families—can contribute to confusion, frustration and ineffectiveness.

Where Do We Go From Here?

- All of these factors contribute to inconsistent implementation, leading to uneven student outcomes.
- This doesn't mean we abandon our model—we deeply believe in the power of public, ABAR Montessori education.
- However, it does mean we must sharpen our focus and invest in critical areas.
  - In the short-term, we are building leader capacity around data fluency and instructional strategies, prioritizing use of common curriculum pacing guides, and focusing on ensuring Essential Standards are taught and mastered, while strengthening partnerships with parents and caregivers and SEL approaches.
  - For the longer-term, our strategic plan will lay out both a theory of change and a set of strategic priorities addressing emerging insights, including strengthening data infrastructure and capacity, codifying core Tier 1 instruction with more deeply embedded SEL, streamlining systems so staff can focus on what matters most, and building additional capacity to deliver on our model

Our Children Are Ready to Flourish

With focused strategic action, we can create the conditions for all students to thrive—turning our mission of equity into reality.
