

International Family Mediation

International Family Mediation (IFM) is the process where a Family Dispute Resolution Practitioner (FDRP) provides expert, impartial assistance in the resolution of family separation disputes across international borders.

Our IFM service has helped...

300+
families

in

30+
countries

How does it work?

1. Initial intake and screening of both parties to determine if mediation is suitable
2. Co-mediation model facilitated via video conferencing
3. Online mediation delivered via video conferencing, working towards an agreement that is in the best interests of children involved
4. Issue of a 60I certificate for the Family Court of Australia, where appropriate

Why Mediation?

In situations of family separation and conflict, mediation can provide a more suitable alternative for a child's long term development and wellbeing. Instead of focusing on past relationship issues, mediation focuses on the future, working towards an agreement that is in the best interests of children involved.

What is the role of the Mediator in International Family Mediation?

- Determine suitability of both parents to proceed to joint sessions
- Ensure parents remain child focused throughout sessions
- Ensure that any agreements made promote the best interest of children
- Remain independent and neutral to all parties involved in the process at all times
- Facilitate conversations that allow parents the opportunity to safely discuss and resolve parenting issues
- Facilitate legally assisted mediations where suitable

What does it cost?

The IFM Service does not receive government funding and charge fees in order to offset costs. The fees associated with our IFM Service are in AUD and charged per person.

Item	Standard Fee	Concession Rate
