TRADITIONAL BEACH CEREMONY

The ceremony takes place on a private, white sandy beach covered with colorful flowers and coconut palms. In the privacy of the villa, one of our dancers helps the couple to dress up in white pareos.

A traditional outrigger canoe takes them to the place of the ceremony, where they are welcomed to the sound of the Pu. The priest unites the couple in Tahitian language according to the Polynesian tradition and blesses them with sea water. The bride and groom then exchange flower necklaces and crowns as they exchange their vows.

They are baptized with their Polynesian names and receive their wedding certificate. Dancers wrap the couple using a traditional Tifaifai (Polynesian wedding quilt), as a symbol of their union, and the priest gives them a last benediction. The couple is introduced to Polynesian dancing before being escorted back to their villa, where a delicious wedding cake and a bottle of French Champagne await them on their decorated terrace.

The ceremony includes :

- Supervision of the Wedding Coordinator
- Master of Ceremony (Polynesian priest)
- Polynesian musicians and dancers
- Flower decoration
- Pareos to dress the couple the traditional way (if the bride and groom have their own wedding clothes, the pareos will be given to them as a gift)
- Two flower necklaces & crowns

CHAPEL CEREMONY

The ceremony takes place in our exclusive overwater glass-bottom chapel, ideally located in front of the Mount Otemanu. The Wedding Coordinator escorts the couple to the chapel, where the priest welcomes them to the sounds of ukuleles and Polynesian love songs sung by the cast of musicians and dancers.

Mixing traditions and local touches, the Master of Ceremony unifies the couple using “Auti” leaves, pure water and flower necklaces and crowns. The couple is then baptized with Polynesian names and receives their wedding certificate.

The priest surrounds them with the traditional Tifaifai (Polynesian wedding quilt), which symbolizes their union, while he gives them a last benediction. After the nuptials, locals perform typical Polynesian dances and songs to celebrate the couple's love.

The newlyweds are then escorted back to the villa, where a wedding cake and a bottle of French Champagne are set up in a romantic atmosphere on the terrace.

The ceremony includes :

- Supervision of the Wedding Coordinator
