LEGAL CEREMONY

LEGAL CEREMONY AT THE BORA BORA TOWNHALL

Since 2009, foreign visitors can legally marry in French Polynesia.

We would like to inform you that St. Regis Bora Bora Resort does not organize religious unions in the churches of the island. For a couple of French nationality or residing in France, it is not possible to marry at the Bora Bora Town Hall.

However, for a couple of non-French nationality or dual nationality (French and other), the marriage can be recognized in your country at the French Embassy.

Our team will be happy to assist you in organizing your legal ceremony at the Bora Bora Town Hall, located on the main island, in Vaitape. We will help you prepare the necessary administrative documents for the marriage ceremony and verify their compliance before submission to the Town Hall.

The proposed fee includes round-trip boat transfer for 2 people to the Vaitape Town Hall, a translator, and 2 witnesses. The boat ride lasts approximately 1 hour round-trip, and the ceremony is an authentic legal ceremony at the Bora Bora Town Hall.

Documents must be prepared in advance and sent at least 3 months before the wedding. The marriage can be recognized in your country at the French Embassy upon your return. A brochure dedicated to legal weddings is available upon request.

We invite you to click here to access the legal ceremony brochure.

POLYNESIAN SYMBOLS

THE AUTI LEAF

This symbol holds a sacred meaning in Polynesian tradition. It represents the spiritual connection between the two individuals, as well as the divine blessing of their union and protection from evil spirits.

A leaf is divided into two to create two bracelets, one for each member of the couple. The act of creating these two bracelets from the same leaf symbolizes the sacred bond and union of the couple through marriage. The Auti leaf bracelets are then placed on the door of the house to ensure the gods protect the home.

THE MOANA

Nature holds a central place in Polynesian tradition, as it is believed to have been shaped by the gods. The natural elements are thus considered sacred and pure.

Once the union is protected by the gods, it must be purified to offer the couple a fresh start together. Pure water is drawn from the lagoon and poured over the joined hands of the couple, purifying them from their sins and allowing them to begin their life together on a new foundation.

The wedding is thus blessed by nature and the gods.

POLYNESIAN SYMBOLS

FLOWER CROWNS AND LEIS

The symbols represented convey deep values such as harmony, dedication, and mutual commitment between partners. By exchanging these symbols, the couple expresses their willingness to fully embrace the union and commit, with respect and loyalty, to building their life together.

This symbolic exchange reflects their determination to nurture their relationship, support each other in difficult times, and actively invest in their marriage, with the promise to face life's challenges together.

THE TIFAIFAI

The Tifaifai is a special fabric created by joining two distinct pieces of cloth. These two pieces are united to form a single, stronger, and more durable piece.

This symbol embodies the union of the couple. Just as the two fabrics are merged to create a stronger piece, the two members of the couple unite to form one home, stronger and more harmonious.

The couple will be wrapped in the Tifaifai to seal their union and their love. The Tifaifai, in red, represents love, an essential and inseparable element in the couple's relationship.
