

Autobiography Examples For College Students

1. Engineering Student Autobiography

Hi, I'm Blake Jackson, and I am a Mechanical Engineering student at ABC University. I've always been fascinated by the work of machines. Since I was little, I liked disassembling toys and even some gadgets to see how they are built. I think this curiosity and genuine interest in how things are made is what encouraged me to pursue a career in engineering. During my high school and college years, I got particularly interested in robotics and have a goal to make my contribution to the advancement of technology.

2. Literature Student Autobiography

My name is Frank Greys Jr. Currently, I'm completing my second year of the English Literature program at XYZ University. I got interested in literature early. From my childhood years, I remember the thrill of entering the large library in my grandparents' house and finding a new captivating story. Whether it's poetry, science fiction, a collection of essays, or anything else, I've always found beauty in literature. And when I was in high school, I also got interested in writing my own stories. This lifelong passion for books and writing urged me to study English Literature and delve into the art of storytelling. I hope that one day, I will turn my hobby into a career and become a professional writer.

3. Business Student Autobiography

I'm Kim Keller, and I study Business Administration at DEF College. I grew up in the family of an inspired entrepreneur and always took an interest in my father's ventures. As a child, I always tried to follow in my dad's footsteps. I created DIY jewelry, made lemonade, and sold all types of things to explore ways to build my own business. When I became older, I decided to follow my passion and earn a degree in Business. In college, I enjoy figuring out corporate structures, finance, management, and related fields. I believe that all the knowledge I gain brings me closer to my ultimate aim - becoming an entrepreneur like my dad.
