MEET PLI'S TEAM

DEAR BROTHERS & SISTERS IN CHRIST,

More than once this year, someone has asked me a version of the same question: with everything happening out there, is PLI okay? Here is my honest answer. It has been a hard year AND I have never been more certain that God is at work in this place.

There is conflict overseas and fear closer to home. Families are carrying grief for loved ones in countries at war, along with uncertainty about what the current immigration landscape in the U.S. means for them. For our neighbors, none of this is a distant headline. It involves their families, their friends, and the countries they once called home.

And still, the work goes on here at PLI. Classes meet. Volunteers show up daily. People are learning about God. They are experiencing prayer in Jesus' name. God is sustaining the work, and He deserves praise for it all.

God is not a bystander. Acts 17:26-27 tells us He "made all the nations … and He marked out their appointed times in history and the boundaries of their lands … so that they would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him…" We don't get to decide who God brings to Houston. That is His sovereign work. We get to decide how we welcome them when they arrive.

At PLI, we obey Jesus' command to love God and love people by walking alongside immigrant and refugee families, creating a place of hope and belonging. Rooted in relationship, we minister to people's educational, emotional, and eternal needs. The first opens the door. The second builds the relationship. The third ministers to the soul.

You will see all three in the pages ahead — a mother finding her confidence in an ESL classroom, two women reading each other's scriptures and deepening their relationship, a camper praying, "Dear God, show me the truth and reveal yourself to me." God is leading people on a journey into relationship with Him.

For nearly fifteen years, He has built this ministry through ordinary people who keep saying yes to Him — staff, volunteers, donors, church partners, and prayer warriors. He is faithful. He is trustworthy. He is full of mercy and grace.

Jesus told His disciples plainly:

> "In this world you will have trouble. But take heart! I have overcome the world." — John 16:33

The trouble is real. So is the victory — and it is His to give.

Thank you for your prayers, your generosity, and your faithful presence this year. I am grateful to walk alongside you as partners in the gospel.

Grace & Peace to you,

Michael Obringer

Executive Director & Co-Founder

ESL PROGRAM

For many students, ESL class is a first step toward building a life in a new country. It's a place to learn English, build friendships, feel welcomed, and find a community that feels like family.

A Guiding Light: Sophia's Story

I joined PLI right after the pandemic. It was not easy: masks, safety rules, and being the only Tigrinya speaker in my class. But over time, I grew comfortable with my teachers and classmates, and I found something I did not expect: peace.

PLI has been the safest place for me and my children. It is where I built my confidence, grew my communication skills, and learned what it means to be a good listener, both in theory and in practice. That skill has helped me heal and overcome my own challenges.

Some of my favorite memories are the parties we prepared together, built on respect for each other's cultures; the Christmas field trips, Family Fun Nights, and English Camps. Last summer, my son, who is neurodivergent, attended English Camp and was fully welcomed. Watching him grow in his social skills was one of the most moving experiences of my life.

I am thankful for the PLI staff who keep everything running with a smile, for teachers whose patience and generosity changed my path, and for classmates who let me feel loved. I will not forget you.

"PLI is truly a guiding light that Jesus desires all Christians and others to be." — Sophia

Classmates Becoming Family: Nahzi's Story

When Nahzi first came to the United States, she found PLI by chance. She calls joining the ESL Program the best decision of her life: "It's a place where people truly care about you and your future."

Shy and nervous about speaking English, Nahzi found steady encouragement from PLI's ESL teachers. On her birthday, her teacher surprised her with flowers and a cake while the whole class sang. It was a small gesture, but it showed her that PLI was more than a place to learn English; it was family.

That family grew through Women's Community Nights, where staff and volunteers listened to Nahzi's struggles and prayed for her. She built friendships with classmates from different cultures, celebrated together, and visited one another's homes. She even invited friends to join, and today they're part of the community too.

With newfound confidence, she landed her first job, where she now speaks English with customers every day. As she graduates, she feels both proud of how far she's come and sad to leave the people who became her family.

"Everyone should come to PLI," she says, "not just for the education, but for the relationships, community and the personal growth."

"I will never forget my journey at PLI." — Nahzi

JOHN 14:27

Peace I leave with you; my peace I give you. I do not give to you as the world gives. Do not let your hearts be troubled and do not be afraid.

CHILDREN'S PROGRAM

For many families new to this country, early childhood education gives their youngest a strong start. It's a place where children grow academically and socially, feel welcomed, and know they are seen and loved.

"I Want to Go to PLI"

A handful of PLI children started school this year, and their mothers shared something that encouraged the team: for some children, the first week of school was hard, not because they disliked school, but because they wanted to be at PLI instead.

They cried because they missed their teachers, friends, and people they had come to know and trust. One mother told Ashley, our Children's Program Leader, that her daughter is always happy when she comes to PLI. In fact, one of the first things she says every morning is: "I want to go to PLI."

For these children, PLI has become a place where they feel welcomed, cared for, and known. They recognize the teachers who greet them, the volunteers who spend time with them, and the friends they have made along the way. For them, PLI isn't just a program. It's home.

HEBREWS 6:19-20

We have this hope as an anchor for the soul, firm and secure. It enters the inner sanctuary behind the curtain, where our forerunner, Jesus, has entered on our behalf. He has become a high priest forever, in the order of Melchizedek.

Two Strangers, One Friendship: Noor & Grace

Noor first came to PLI as an ESL student. She made such strong progress in English that she later joined PLI's staff as a Children's Program teacher. In that role, she was paired with Grace as a weekly conversation partner.

They met in September as strangers practicing English. Now they're friends. Grace and Noor swapped stories about the challenges of working motherhood, and Noor shared she wanted to earn a Child Development Associate credential. Grace offered to help her build the portfolio needed to achieve her goal.

Their conversations deepened, and one week it turned to Ramadan and fasting. Noor and Grace found unexpected common ground between their faiths, sharing thoughts on intimacy with God and spiritual clarity through fasting. The conversation opened a new depth of vulnerability between them.

Then came the hard news. Over Thanksgiving, Noor's father suffered a stroke back in her home country. Grace listened as Noor wept, feeling helpless from so far away. Grace shared how prayer had carried her through her own darkest hours, and offered to pray for Noor's father.

Weeks later, Noor's father passed away. She returned to PLI in shock and grief, wishing she could have been there. In that moment, Grace shared her own story of losing her first child years before. Noor asked, "You're not sad about it anymore?" Grace answered, "No, because I have the assurance of heaven. It's only the presence of Jesus that got me through those years." Noor listened with deep interest.

Noor and Grace are still friends, and when life gets hard, Noor asks Grace to pray.

WOMEN'S PROGRAM

In the Women's Program, relationships grow through the little things like sharing tea, visiting homes, and making time for one more conversation. These simple, consistent moments build trust and create space for deeper relationships.

"It Makes Me Think": Mizba & Alison

Mizba, a woman Alison is walking alongside, wanted to talk about spiritual things. She began coming to church with Alison, even while hoping to convince Alison to become Muslim. She kept coming, asking questions, and listening. Alison prayed that, through those conversations, Mizba would be drawn to Jesus.

Their conversations were honest. They talked about Jesus's death, burial, and resurrection, the reliability of Scripture, sin, faith, and the differences between Christianity and Islam. Mizba brought her Qur'an and a study guide, eager to make her case. Alison listened and responded from Scripture. Despite their disagreements, they remained friends.

Then Mizba asked for a Bible in her own language so she could study it for herself. Alison gave her one and helped her learn how to navigate it, beginning with Matthew. In return, Mizba gave Alison a Qur'an and asked her to read it.

When asked what coming to a Christian church did for her, Mizba gave an answer Alison hasn't forgotten:

> "Going to a Christian church doesn't make me happy or sad, but it makes me think." — Mizba

Afterward, the two women continue reading each other's scriptures, texting, talking, listening, and asking questions.

For the Women's Program, this is meaningful. Sometimes ministry looks like having the patience to walk alongside someone long enough for a conversation to take root and God's seed to have time to sprout.

Two Generations, Same Questions: Najwa & Amina

On Good Friday, Melody, Laura, and Carolyn visited Najwa, a former student, to offer condolences after a recent loss. Over a meal she lovingly prepared, she asked what Easter meant. They explained sacrifice in the Old Testament and how Jesus's death on the cross bridges the gap that sin creates between God and us.

Najwa listened quietly, clearly understanding every word, her three children sitting nearby.

A few months later, Najwa's daughter Amina had her own encounter with those same questions at PLI's English Camp, where she asked her group leader:

"How do I go to heaven?"

"Who is greater, Muhammad or Jesus?"

"Is Allah God, and does God hear us when we pray to Allah?"

Both mother and daughter are wrestling with the same big questions in the same season. God is drawing them toward Himself from multiple directions.

COLOSSIANS 2:6-7

So then, just as you received Christ Jesus as Lord, continue to live your lives in him, rooted and built up in him, strengthened in the faith as you were taught, and overflowing with thankfulness.

MEN'S PROGRAM

PLI's Men's Program creates a space for friendships to grow and trust to deepen as men gather each week to share a meal, connect, and support one another.

Negin's Answered Prayer

For several years, Negin has come to PLI week after week, building strong friendships with volunteers from the Men's Community. He struggled with a difficult job search for two years and became so discouraged he wanted to give up. Jim, a volunteer, felt burdened to pray that God would provide a job Negin hadn't even pursued yet.

The next week, Negin arrived at Men's Community with good news: a previous employer had called him out of the blue and asked if he'd like to come back to work for them. Jim told Negin what he'd prayed, and together they praised God.

When Negin later told another volunteer, David, about Jim's answered prayer, he said God only answers the prayers of "good" people. David explained that good works don't earn God's favor; Jesus's death on the cross does, paying the penalty for our sins. Because of His sacrifice, we can believe in him and receive God's forgiveness.

While Negin was driving long-haul trucks across the country, he kept in touch with the volunteers, texting regularly and swapping podcasts and audiobooks. He passed through town in the spring for a few days and treated Jim and four other Men's Program volunteers to an Iftar meal at a local restaurant. As they parted ways, Negin told each of them how much their friendship meant to him.

The Men's Program volunteers continue to pray Jesus will reveal himself and overwhelm Negin with his righteousness and love. These are the deep, ordinary friendships found at PLI. Friendships that shine a light in the darkness and share the truth of the Gospel.

AFTER-SCHOOL PROGRAM

FAMILY FUN NIGHT

Family Fun Night brings PLI families, students, and volunteers together each month to enjoy fun-filled activities, build relationships, and strengthen community.

"We Have to Wait for Jesus to Return!"

The Khan family has been part of PLI since 2021. Both parents have attended ESL classes, and their children have participated in the Children's, Teen Girls', and After-School programs, and over time the family has built deep trust with PLI staff and volunteers.

Three of the family's youngest children now attend Family Fun Night, a monthly Friday gathering. Their youngest, five-year-old Jana, is an enthusiastic participant. One month, after reading the book Stop and Smell the Cookies, a story about patience, Blaire asked, "What are some ways we have to be patient?" Jana raised her hand and exclaimed:

"We have to wait for Jesus to return!"

On another night, Jana insisted wishing on a shooting star means God will answer your prayers. This misunderstanding gave Blaire another opportunity to share God's truth and what it really means for God to answer prayers.

PLI creates a safe place for children to learn, ask questions, and grow in relationships. Jesus is faithfully planting seeds of truth that can take root in their hearts and shape their lives for years to come.

ENGLISH CAMP

At English Camp, children have the freedom to explore big questions about faith at their own pace, discover what they believe, and begin making their faith their own.

Faith in Their Own Words: Lea & Hakem

At English Camp, twelve-year-old Lea carries her faith the way she carries herself, quietly, steadily, ready to share.

When she feels alone or scared, she prays. Even when she feels good, she still prays, just to talk with God. That instinct shaped how she showed up for a friend after the STAAR Test didn't go the way they'd hoped. Lea told her the story of Jacob and Joseph, then offered her own words of comfort: "It's okay you didn't get the results you wanted, because God gave you peace of mind to pass the test." She says she likes encouraging her friends with faith, "so people aren't afraid or alone."

That same steadiness showed up in smaller moments, too. During game time, when other campers weren't following instructions and it kept costing her a turn, Lea stayed patient, no frustration, no complaints, just quiet self-control.

Hakem brought a different energy, the excitement of recognition. When the staff introduced the story of David and Goliath, his hand shot up, as he already knew it. He'd seen the movie, and he wanted to help tell it to the group.

Those two postures: Lea's quiet reflection and Hakem's eager engagement showed up again and again as campers wrestled with big questions together. When asked "why crowds wanted to see Jesus," one camper said, "to get hope." Then Lea added, "to have her sins forgiven." When asked who gave Jesus authority to forgive sins, Hakem answered simply: "God did." Another camper added, "Jesus is the Son of God."

Some answers were quiet, and some came with a hand in the air, but they all came from kids thinking hard about who Jesus is.

ENGLISH CAMP

Abida's Prayer

"Dear God, show me the truth and reveal yourself to me." That is what Abida prayed. She is just one camper, but her experience is a pattern PLI sees repeated again and again.

Abida has come to English Camp for the past two years. She has a degenerative eye condition that has gradually worsened; now she can't see well outdoors.

On the first day, campers ran hurdles and sprints, jumping a short hurdle before their sprint. Abida skipped the hurdle because of her vision. When Mercy, a staff member's daughter, asked why, Abida's classroom leader gently explained that Abida has a vision disability. Mercy's attitude changed instantly; she became Abida's cheerleader, encouraging her through every activity and holding her hand to guide her.

Another day, Coach Dom, spent several minutes speaking truth over Abida. He reminded her that God made her special and knew her before she was born. He also told her God has great plans for her. She seemed distracted at first, but as he kept going, she said, "I pray, and God answers my prayer," recalling the time she'd prayed for a box of toys, and God had given her one.

By the end of the week, Abida responded to a lesson by saying, "I want to go to heaven. Jesus was sent by God to take the punishment for our sins." Then she prayed again, "Dear God, show me the truth and reveal yourself to me."

This is what a week at English Camp is meant to do: not force growth, but give campers space to absorb what they are learning at their own pace and let God do the rest.

TEEN GIRLS PROGRAM

Every Tuesday night, a group of teenage girls gathers to have fun, eat together, engage with different texts, and ask hard questions. Through this time, God is changing their hearts.

Changed Hearts

Negar, one of the group's stronger readers, laughed when a girl who reads at a lower level stumbled through her passage. PLI staff, Kim Johnson stepped in and asked her to let a volunteer help. It could have ended there with a small correction quickly forgotten. But by the end of the meeting, when another lower-level reader took her turn, Negar didn't laugh. She waited, listened, and when the girl finished, she congratulated her, then turned and gave the staff a thumbs-up, grinning. She knew she'd done the right thing, and she wanted them to know.

That same posture showed up again and again this semester, in different girls.

One young woman, during a discussion of redemption in the story of Ruth, said she wants to spend more time with God. She wants her prayers to be more than words and to come from the heart.

Another girl told Kim she wasn't coming back, saying she didn't want to hear "Jesus stories," but she returned. On the night they studied the crucifixion, she volunteered to read the passage.

A few weeks later, a different girl, who also said "no more Jesus stories," came back for the semester's last meeting and read the resurrection account from Luke aloud in front of everyone. And when they talked about how the Quran and the Bible each describe Jesus, another girl spoke up without hesitation and said:

"We believe that Jesus came and died for sins."

A thumbs-up, a volunteered reading, an unprompted confession of faith are the small, unmistakable signs of hearts being changed on Tuesday nights at PLI.

> EZEKIEL 36:26
> I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit in you; I will remove from you your heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh.

A Prayer in His Name

Last October, multiple quiet concerns moved through the families of some teen girls. One mother worried about how PLI staff prayed "in Jesus' name" , voiced concern, and shared with others. The following week, attendance dropped sharply; chairs that had been full just days before sat empty.

Kim, the program's leader, could have let it go. Instead, when a volunteer mentioned what she'd heard, Kim picked up the phone and texted one of the families to check in. What she found surprised her. The real obstacle wasn't talking about Jesus. It was a ride. Transportation, not theology, had kept the girls away.

The next week, the two sisters returned to retrieve a phone they'd left behind, this time with their mother. Kim thanked her for still trusting the program with her daughters. The conversation took an unexpected turn when the mother shared that she loved PLI and hoped to take English classes.

As she turned to go, Kim asked if she'd be safe walking home. "I walk for exercise," she said. In that small exchange, something opened. She shared about her health struggles.

Kim asked if she could pray for her.

Standing there, Kim prayed. She asked God to let the mother know how deeply she is loved and to heal her. When she finished, her daughters translated the prayer as best they could.

It was the same mother who, weeks earlier, had reportedly steered her daughters away from a place that prays "in Jesus' name." This time, she stood and received a prayer in Jesus' name for herself.

Throughout the year, PLI hosts community events that bring families, staff, and volunteers together. These gatherings create opportunities to connect, enjoy fellowship, and build relationships beyond programs.

Showing Up to Speak Truth: Karen & Jean

At the Christmas tree farm scavenger hunt, Karen and Jean were assigned to the "Savior" station. Their job was to tell the story of Jesus and the two thieves on the cross. Jean began with the groundwork: sin, mercy, and why the cross matters.

Most people nodded, smiled politely, and moved on. But near the end, one man stayed. He listened closely and then said, "But we must be punished for what we do wrong."

After Jean explained the gospel, he paused. "But in my religion, Jesus is just a prophet." Jean responded,

"I don't believe in religion. I believe in the truth."

She encouraged him to pray and ask God to reveal the truth to him, wherever that prayer might lead. He looked at her for a long moment and said, "Thank you. Thank you very much."

Jean never learned the man's name, but something was stirring in his heart, and she happened to be standing there when it happened. PLI's role is to show up, speak the truth of Jesus, and trust God with the growth.

MINISTRY RESIDENCY & CROSS-CULTURAL TRAINING

The harvest needs workers, so before residents step into cross-cultural ministry, PLI invests in equipping them.

Preparing Workers for the Harvest

Message from Josh Johnson, Training Director

Fiscal year 2026 was different. In the past, PLI's trainings have mostly been held at PLI for staff and volunteers. This year, in addition to the regular trainings, we held two seminars open to churches and ministries serving among Muslims in Houston. But that's not all! We were also invited to train groups at a handful of churches. All in all, 336 adults attended PLI's trainings. Praise the Lord!

PLI does not only provide training for adults. We have middle-school and high-school students visit PLI, where I introduce young minds to the joys and challenges of cross-cultural life.

After two years of hosting interns, this year was good preparation for our longer residency program, which will have 3 phases: Foundation & Orientation, Formation & Immersion, and Leadership & Integration.

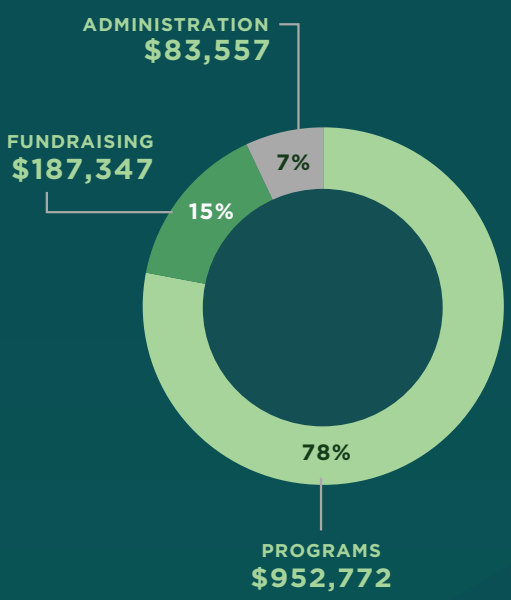

If you know someone who is looking for ministry experience in Houston, please tell them about Engage Houston, PLI's cross-cultural ministry residency. We want to serve the Church by training and preparing local and overseas missionaries. God has given PLI an amazing opportunity for ministry among the Muslim population in Houston. To learn more about the ministry residency program, go to www.EngageHou.org.
