The Phillips' Mill Community Association is proud to present the thirty-third year of the Phillips' Mill Photographic Exhibition (PMPE). The premise for this prestigious show is a belief in photography as a fine art and in photographers as artists. Thus, work is selected based on the strength of an artist's personal vision, creativity, and visual language.

The PMPE also relies on the contributions made by four key groups. First, of course, are the amateur and professional photographers from across the country who submit their works for jurying, a process that is challenging because so many images are of such high quality. Second are the esteemed jurors—Dewitt Jones, Frank T. Smith, and Sara Ascalon—who this year selected one hundred and fifty photos from the total of 1,028 that were entered.

Next, we are deeply grateful to the Phillips' Mill Photo Patrons who have so generously contributed to help make the exhibition possible.

And last, but essential to every aspect of the PMPE, are the multifaceted efforts of the Photo Committee, whose members have been responsible for the show's success over three decades and counting. Each year, these volunteers demonstrate how truly dedicated they are to photography itself and to promoting the fine arts in the Delaware Valley.
