Guidelines and Guardrails: A NZ Perspective on Ethics, AI and Risk – a two-hour workshop for senior risk professionals

SPECIAL INVITATION FOR RIMS MEMBERS

SPECIAL INVITE FOR RIMS MEMBERS:

Guidelines and Guardrails: A NZ Perspective on Ethics, AI and Risk

We are pleased to invite RIMS members to this exclusive 2-hour workshop with Jane Arnott MNZM, the Director of The Ethics Conversation hosted by our sponsor Marsh Australia and New Zealand. Lookout for the email in your inbox.

AI brings risk and opportunity - in far from equal measure.

As the costlessness and volume of data is harnessed this workshop will examine who holds the reins and what could be expected of you or your organisation before jumping on the bandwagon.

Interviews with NZ-based AI developers and insights gleaned from global experts, academic studies and the Institute of Business Ethics will ensure this workshop provides practical tools and frameworks for everyday application. It comes with warnings as well as a vision for the business future.

Jane has been championing the application of ethical values to organisations and sectors across New Zealand for almost twenty years. She led the market entry of the Institute of Business Ethics, UK to New Zealand in 2010 and continued in the role of Country Manager and Associate until founding her own company The Ethics Conversation in 2021.

She develops and delivers tailored Professional and Business Ethics workshops across professional bodies, listed companies, NGO's and private businesses. These have included Engineering NZ, Financial Advice NZ, Human Resources Institute, Survey and Spatial NZ, FMG, Tourism Holdings and Southern Cross Healthcare.

As a market commentator she openly reviews business behaviour against their codes of ethics and speak up policies.

Jane was made a member of the NZ Order of Merit in 2021 and became an adjunct research fellow to the Brian Picot Chair in Ethical Leadership at Victoria University of Wellington in the same year.
