

Federal review of our State Plan

Our federal agency approved the plan to begin October 1, 2026.

What reviewers liked

Our priorities respond to people's needs.
Community input helped shape the plan.

People with disabilities can speak up and lead.
The plan includes communities often left out.

A few follow-up edits do not delay the work.

More strengths in our State Plan

Working together

Partners will help services work better together, including disability, mental health and aging services.

Community ideas

The plan supports new ideas from communities to meet needs and help people live the lives they choose.

Checking our progress

We have clear ways to learn what is working and hear from people about the results.

Goal 3, Objective 3

What changed?

The revised work focuses on helping people take part.

Make it easier for people with disabilities and families to share ideas and help guide the State Plan.

Share information that people can understand and use.

Show how people's ideas affect the Council's work.

Share useful tools with other community groups.

Goal 3, Objective 3

Why make these changes?

Our federal agency asked us to separate this work from the Council's everyday operations.

Member training and support still matter.
We will track that work separately.

The purpose of the objective stays the same:
help people shape the Council's work and priorities.

The target numbers stay the same for now.
We need to check that they fit the revised work.
