Performance

Strong performance through most of July saw global equities maintain positive territory despite cooling sentiment into the final week of the month. The MSCI World ex-Australia Index rose 3.1% during July, whilst the Bell Global High Conviction Fund (Unhedged) returned +1.2%, underperforming the MSCI World ex-Australia Index by 1.9%.

Performance Attribution

The portfolio delivered a positive return in July, driven by strong performance within Communication Services and Information Technology sectors. Consumer Staples and Health Care were the most significant detractors from an absolute return perspective. Geographically, North American and Asian emerging market holdings outperformed, while European positions lagged. In relative terms, performance benefited from good stock performance within Information Technology Communication Services, however this was offset by weakness in holdings across Health Care, Financials and Industrials. From a style perspective, the portfolio's bias to Quality was a headwind during the month. The MSCI World Quality Index underperformed the MSCI World Index by 1.5% in July and has lagged by nearly 9% over the past 12 months. While this Index is not necessarily a perfect representation of the Quality factor, the divergence between the Quality and Growth Indices over the past 12 months has been quite notable.

From a stock-specific perspective, Alphabet was one of the greatest contributors to performance over the period. While the market remains undecided as to whether Alphabet is an AI beneficiary or not, results showed that the company is managing the Innovator's Dilemma with aplomb. The company posted advertising revenues up 12%, handily exceeding market forecasts, while also demonstrating exponential growth in its AI metrics (such as user token use). While there remains some uncertainty on Alphabet's path forward, these results combined with the discounted valuation suggest that the upside investment case should continue to prevail. Oracle also continued to charge higher during the month as the rapid growth they are experiencing from AI-centred cloud infrastructure continued to resonate with Whilst other noteworthy investors. contributors included ICON (Health Care), (Communication Tencent Holdings Services) and TSMC (Information Technology).

On the detractor side. Novo Nordisk weighed on performance following an unexpected downgrade to its full-year guidance. The company attributed the mainly downgrade to competitive pressures, predominantly from Eli Lilly, and the ongoing prevalence of illegal compounding activity. This illegal activity involves compounding pharmacies selling approved versions semaglutide, the core molecule in Novo's GLP-1 drugs, Wegovy and Ozempic. While the practice was temporarily permitted during a period of supply shortages, it has since become illegal as of May of this year, except for specific patient needs. Investors, including us, had expected that the removal of these illegal compounded versions - estimated to serve over 1 million patients - would lead to a meaningful pickup in prescriptions for branded players like Novo and Eli Lilly. However, this is yet to play out. Despite these headwinds, we continue to believe the long-term addressable market for GLP-1 therapies in diabetes and obesity remains underpenetrated, particularly outside the U.S. where uptake is still in its early stages. At ~11x P/E, the stock is pricing in a substantial amount of risk. We view the risk/reward as attractive, though a clearer path forward. especially around enforcement of compounding regulations and legal action, will likely be needed to reaccelerate script trends. Other noteworthy laggards for July included UnitedHealth Group (Health Care), Nestlé (Consumer Staples) and Fiserv (Financials).

Market Commentary

Risk-on sentiment continued to dominate at the start of the third quarter, driving global equity markets higher. The Magnificent Seven were the most prominent contributors, outperforming by approximately 4%, supported by stronger-than-expected AI capital expenditure forecasts from the hyperscalers. The Growth factor continued to dominate, while Value and Quality remained under pressure. Over the last 12 months, the MSCI World Quality Index has lagged the MSCI World Index and the MSCI World Growth Index by approximately 9% and 13% respectively.

Technology, Sector-wise. Information Energy, Utilities. Industrials. Communication Services outperformed the broader market, while Consumer Staples and Health Care were notable underperformers. Geographically, equities continued to lead, resulting in relative underperformance from European and Asia-Pacific markets. Despite strong gains among mega-cap technology names, SMID cap stocks only modestly underperformed their large-cap counterparts.

Global trade dynamics continued to remain top of mind for investors throughout July. The month saw a series of new agreements reached between the White House and key trading partners, including Vietnam, Japan, and the European Union. While the revised tariff schedules are notably higher than those in place pre-Trump, equity markets responded positively as the terms were generally more lenient than feared. Switzerland was a notable outlier, facing a sharply higher tariff of 39%, which exceeded the level initially announced on Liberation Day. While the probability of a full-scale trade war has moderated, the geopolitical environment remains volatile due to ongoing unpredictability in US policymaking. In the US, the passage of the One Big Beautiful Bill Act on July 2 provided further market support, with the final version proving more expansionary than the initial proposal.

The Q2 earnings season is well underway, with results broadly exceeding expectations. At the time of writing, over 80% of companies in the S&P 500 have beaten EPS expectations, a slightly higher-than-average level. Despite these strong results, investor reactions have been highly variable, with share price swings of +/-20% not uncommon.

In contrast, fixed income markets were relatively quiet. Both the Federal Reserve and European Central Bank held policy rates steady, with the latter citing persistent inflationary pressures and broader market uncertainties. US Treasury yields ticked higher for most of July, creating headwinds for unhedged offshore equity investors amid a stronger US dollar. However, yields subsequently retreated in early August following the release of underwhelming US non-farm payrolls data.

In commodities, Gold's recent rally paused. Copper prices, meanwhile, experienced pronounced volatility following a surprise announcement of a 50% tariff on imports, which was later reversed by month-end via an exemption.

Portfolio Activity

There were no wholesale name changes made to the portfolio during July, but the ongoing market volatility presented opportunities to alter the sizing of existing positions to reflect the team's conviction levels. This activity included meaningfully adding to holdings such as Apple (Information Technology), while reducing exposure to holdings such as Icon (Health Care), Oracle (Information Technology) and ASML (Information Technology).
