

SERMON CHEAT SHEET

God Gave Us Life | Genesis 2 - 3

THE BEAUTY AND PURPOSE OF LIFE.

Created in His Image: The Crown of Creation

In Genesis, we see that God created humanity uniquely in His image, which sets us apart from the rest of creation. Unlike the mountains or the rivers, we reflect the very nature of God, infused with purpose, dignity, and value. This identity as image-bearers not only highlights our worth but also our calling to steward the world around us as representatives of the Creator. It's a powerful reminder that every person holds immeasurable value, crafted lovingly by God to know Him and to be known.

The Gift of Life Alongside Our Purpose

God didn't just create life; He blessed us with it, inviting us into a world brimming with beauty and potential. In Genesis 1:29, God provides for humanity's needs, underscoring that life is a gift meant to be enjoyed and cherished. Yet this gift comes with responsibility. We are called to work and take care of creation, which is both a privilege and a blessing. Life is not merely about existence; it's about thriving and fulfilling the purpose God set before us.

The Tragic Choice: Sin and Its Consequences

Despite living in perfect harmony, Adam and Eve made a choice that led to their downfall, showing us the gravity of disobedience. The serpent planted seeds of doubt, leading Eve to trust in a lie instead of God's word. This moment not only shattered their relationship with God but also unleashed sin and its consequences into the world. Each of us, like Eve, grapples with temptation, but we must remember that choosing God's truth over worldly whispers leads to life rather than death.

A Promise of Redemption: Hope Amidst Brokenness

Even in the aftermath of sin, God's response is not just punishment but a promise of hope and restoration. In Genesis 3:15, He foreshadows the coming Messiah who will reconcile us back to Himself. This is the essence of the Gospel: God's relentless love pursues us, promising that through Christ, we can experience redemption. No matter how far we stray, His desire is to bring us back into a loving relationship, assuring us that our failures do not define our identity.
