Beyond T cells: targeting the TME
Key challenges: reprogramming the TME to enable cytotoxic T cell activation

TME targets: tumor-intrinsic cells, CIMs, immunosuppressive cells, tumor cells, myeloid cells, APCs, and other cells

Immunosuppressive cells:

- Tumor-intrinsic cells
- Tumor-associated macrophages (TAMs)
- Myeloid-derived suppressor cells (MDSCs)
- Regulatory T cells (Tregs)
- Tumor-associated neutrophils (TANs)
- Tumor-associated mast cells (TAMCs)
- Tumor-associated dendritic cells (TADCs)
- Tumor-associated fibroblasts (TAFs)
- Tumor-associated endothelial cells (TAECs)
- Tumor-associated pericytes (TAPs)
- Tumor-associated microvascular cells (TAMVCs)
- Tumor-associated stromal cells (TASCs)
- Tumor-associated mesenchymal cells (TAMCs)
- Tumor-associated epithelial cells (TAECs)
- Tumor-associated neural cells (TANCs)
- Tumor-associated glial cells (TAGs)
- Tumor-associated hematopoietic cells (TAHCs)
- Tumor-associated lymphoid cells (TALCs)
- Tumor-associated myeloid cells (TAMCs)
- Tumor-associated epithelial cells (TAECs)
- Tumor-associated neural cells (TANCs)
- Tumor-associated glial cells (TAGs)
- Tumor-associated hematopoietic cells (TAHCs)
- Tumor-associated lymphoid cells (TALCs)

Diagram: A diagram showing a cluster of cells on the left, with an arrow pointing to a cluster of cells on the right, representing the transition from a tumor-intrinsic state to a reprogrammed state.
