Subject: MMTLP - Meeting Request

Chairman Atkins, Commissioner Peirce, Commissioner Uyeda,

My name is Greg McCabe. I serve as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Next Bridge Hydrocarbons and am its largest shareholder. Next Bridge is the successor to MMTLP, a matter with which the Commission is undoubtedly familiar.

On September 4, 2025, I wrote a letter to my Next Bridge shareholder to commemorate 1,000 days since FINRA's U3 trading halt of MMTLP. The central message of that letter was simple:

I remain grateful that we fight this fight in America, the greatest country the world has ever known. Imperfect as it may be, America still stands on the principles of truth, justice, and the Rule of Law. History tells us that, in the end, America gets it right.

Ten months later, despite everything that has transpired, I still believe those words.

Recent FOIA disclosures reveal that in September and October of 2023, the Commission engaged in discussions and meetings with Howard Meyerson, Managing Director of the Financial Information Forum, regarding concerns raised by their member broker-dealers about Next Bridge's July 2023 S-1 filing, as well as the consequences stemming from FINRA's U3 trading halt. Those communications are deeply troubling. They reflect not only misleading information and interference with our corporate affairs, but something even more fundamental: access.

An industry trade organization, with interests adverse to Next Bridge, was granted the opportunity to communicate its concerns directly to the Commission while the company most directly affected, along with our tens of thousands of shareholders whose investments remain trapped by the events surrounding MMTLP, was afforded no voice or participation in what is clearly still a significant problem to this day.

For more than three and a half years, Next Bridge has done exactly what the Commission asked of us. We have respected the process and the institution. We have followed every applicable rule and regulation. We have responded to every SEC comment. We even amended and refiled two years of periodic reports, despite our profound disagreement with the basis for requiring those revisions. Our actions were all premised on the belief that cooperation was the path toward resolution.

Yet after years of compliance, extraordinary expense, and immeasurable harm to our shareholders, the central issues remain unresolved.

Accordingly, I again respectfully request an in-person meeting with the Commission at your earliest availability. I welcome the opportunity to discuss the facts, answer your questions, and work toward a fair and durable resolution that does as little damage as possible to the American financial system.

If the Commission has no intention of granting this request for a meeting, I would respectfully ask that you let me know as soon as practicable so that I may accurately assess next steps. If I do not hear from someone at the SEC by next Friday, July 10th, I will assume you are not going to schedule a meeting with me.

I remain hopeful that the principles of America I wrote about last September still guide this institution. This is an opportunity to demonstrate that they do.

Respectfully,

Greg McCabe
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
