CORRUGATED CARD

Corrugated card, also known as corrugated cardboard, is a sturdy, lightweight material made from three layers of paper. It consists of an outer liner, an inner liner, and a fluted (or wavy) middle layer sandwiched between them. This structure gives it strength and durability, making it ideal for packaging, shipping, and crafting. The fluted middle layer provides cushioning, protecting items from impacts during transport.

This structure helps maintain the freshness of the food by providing insulation and absorbing moisture. It is food-safe, recyclable, and customizable, making it a sustainable and versatile choice for various types of food packaging.

This fluted design helps prevent packaging from damaging while also retaining heat and absorbing moisture, ensuring your food stays fresh. The material is food-safe, recyclable, and customisable, making it ideal for branding and efficient delivery

SPECIFICATIONS

A-flute is the thickest corrugated cardboard type (4.7 mm), offering excellent cushioning and strength, ideal for packaging fragile or heavy items.

A-FLUTE

B-flute is thinner corrugated cardboard (3.2 mm), offering good crush resistance and printability, ideal for retail packaging and smaller boxes.

B-FLUTE

C-flute is medium-thickness corrugated cardboard (3.7 mm), balancing cushioning and strength, suitable for shipping boxes and general packaging.

C-FLUTE

E-flute is thin corrugated cardboard (1.5 mm), offering excellent print quality and rigidity, ideal for retail packaging and fine printing.

E-FLUTE

F-flute is ultra-thin corrugated cardboard (0.8 mm), providing superior printability and a smooth finish, perfect for luxury packaging and detailed graphics.

F-FLUTE

BC-flute combines B and C flutes for strong cushioning and stacking strength, ideal for heavy-duty packaging, while EB-flute blends E and B flutes, offering a balance of rigidity and printability, perfect for retail-ready and protective packaging.

THERMOFORM & INJECTION MOULDERS

Thermoform and injection moulders are advanced manufacturing techniques used to create durable, precise, and lightweight products, particularly for food packaging. Thermoforming involves heating plastic sheets to mold them into specific shapes, while injection molding injects molten plastic into molds for complex designs. Both methods produce food-safe, leak-resistant containers that preserve freshness and prevent contamination.

Their precision ensures consistent quality, and the lightweight design enhances convenience for transportation and use. Highly efficient and versatile, thermoform and injection moulders are ideal for creating sustainable, recyclable packaging solutions tailored to modern food service needs.
