Bespoke Architectural Glass

Copenhagen, June 2025, During 3 Days of Design, Czech multidisciplinary designer and glass artist Elis Monsport presents a curated exhibition of architectural and collectible glass works, demonstrating how artistic glass can actively shape contemporary space.

The presentation brings together partitions, wall-mounted lighting, a shower screen, a floor lamp, and a vase. Moving between functional architectural elements and sculptural objects, the exhibition reveals glass as a structural and atmospheric medium rather than a purely decorative surface.

Working at the intersection of fine and applied arts, Monsport pushes the boundaries of engraved and kiln-formed glass. Inspired by landscapes, mountains, and the transformation of light, she translates natural atmospheres into refined material expressions. Her practice merges sculpture, craft, and function, transforming glass into an emotionally expressive architectural element.

A strong commitment to longevity and circularity underpins her work. She primarily works with cast and engraved glass and mirrors, materials chosen for their permanence and durability. Each piece is conceived as a long-term architectural component rather than a trend-driven object. Production is local and craft-based whenever possible, with components designed to be separable and recyclable. Surfaces can be refinished instead of replaced, supporting repair over disposal.

Throughout the festival, Monsport will be present to host conversations and consultations, offering insight into technical processes and creative applications. The exhibition functions as an open platform for dialogue, inviting architects, designers, and collectors to explore how glass can structure space, shape atmosphere, and bring lasting artistic value into architecture.
