White Label Project (WLP) is excited to announce its exhibition: Female Design Futures at 3daysofdesign 2026 presenting a women-only curation with 14 women designers and artists from around the world. With the exhibition WLP not only gives a platform to women in design and art from countries which are mostly underrepresented at international design festivals, but also highlights the beauty of global design languages rooted in cultures, origins and craftsmanship.

The 14 women designers and artists include: Ente, Rebeca Cors, and Lofa Ceramics (Mexico), Guculiya (Ukraine), Morii Design (India), Puna Estudio (Peru), Rumba Bor (Thailand), Studio Sana Benzaitar (Morocco), Ananta Design Studio and The Urbanative (South Africa), Topis Ceramica (Guatemala), Milla Novo (Netherlands/Chile), Yael Anders (Switzerland), and Atlas (Colombia).

With this exhibition, WLP invites you to travel the world through design and celebrate the rich heritage of different cultures from Mexico and Guatemala, South Africa and Morocco to India and Thailand. WLP brings together carefully curated impact brands that aim to change the narrative around their home countries' craft by reviving local traditional techniques and bringing them into a contemporary design context, sustainably working hand in hand with local artisans.

“We want to create a platform for women giving space and visibility to exciting impact-driven women designers and artists from all around the world and initiate a dialogue with the Scandinavian design scene,” say the WLP founders about their exhibit in Copenhagen. “This is about more than showcasing beautiful pieces, it is about telling the stories behind them, exploring cultural heritage, and celebrating the inspiring people who create them.”

Meet the 14 women designers and artist founders and connect with some of the artisans present, who will invite you into the fascinating world of their respective brands, local crafts, and cultures. See you there!
