

Fogia is a Swedish furniture maker working globally with designers, architects and private clients. Craftsmanship, material knowledge and close collaboration between designers and makers have shaped the way we work since 1981. With our own factory for woodworking, upholstery, cutting and sewing, we develop furniture designed to grow more distinctive over time. We believe the most enduring pieces balance function with friction – usefulness with character, precision with personality.

Björn Dahlström's comfortable comma is back

Launched over 30 years ago at Milan's Salone del Mobile, the BD1 Lounge Chair by Björn Dahlström has since become part of modern design history. Popularly known as the Comma, the lounge chair appears in the collections of both the Victoria and Albert Museum in London and the Röhsska Museet in Gothenburg. Fogia and Dahlström are now relaunching the BD1 – not for nostalgic reasons, but because it remains as relevant today as it was in the 1990s.

"It has a knack for making itself at home in all sorts of surroundings. It fits just as well in avant-garde settings as in traditional ones. That was true in 1994 and, strangely enough, it still seems to be the case, today," says Björn Dahlström.

Rather than belonging to any specific era, the BD1 presents itself as a furniture piece that exists in a time of its own. This may well be due to its clarity. The basic idea of creating a lounge chair in the form of a typographic character was executed with great rigor and consistency. The design itself is strictly minimalist, yet delightfully naïve – almost comic-book-like.

What was it like for Björn Dahlström to revisit the furniture piece that marked his breakthrough as a furniture designer?

"A bit like seeing an old friend again – a happy reunion. It's really fantastic that something I designed in 1993 has been reborn."
