BRITISH COLUMBIA

B.C. Conservatives propose higher tax caps to offset municipal losses from pipeline assessment

This article reports that a private members bill has been introduced by BC Conservatives to offset the anticipated property tax losses from changes to the BC pipeline assessments (see the posted article in October 2025) and tax revenue. The bill would raise current caps for municipalities if it became law.

NEW BRUNSWICK

Disagreements arise among Fredericton councillors during budget deliberations

This article reports that Fredericton councillors have passed the first step to approving a budget that would maintain the current inside tax rate, following the freezing of property tax assessments for 2026 by the province. The article details points that were raised during the debate.
