Biathlon Canada Bolsters Athlete Support Welcoming Revinix as New Official Recovery Partner
*Four-year agreement will provide Revinix compression recovery boots with integrated heat to support athletes across Biathlon Canada's national programs and tours

CANMORE, Alta. — As Canadian biathletes zero in on a new Olympic quadrennial, Biathlon Canada is teaming up with Revinix for four years, welcoming the Canadian company as the organization's Official Recovery Partner.

Through the agreement, Revinix will provide its compression recovery boots, which combine air compression and heat in one session, along with program support to help enhance athlete recovery across Biathlon Canada's national programs. Units will be allocated to athletes at the World Cup, IBU Cup and junior levels - expanding access to recovery technology for Canadian biathletes at multiple levels of the national program.

"We're proud to partner with a Canadian company that recognizes the opportunity within biathlon and the sport's widespread presence on the European stage," said Kerry Dankers, chief executive officer, Biathlon Canada. "This partnership delivers a direct benefit to our athletes, giving them access to compression and heat recovery technology that can support their preparation and performance throughout the season. We're thrilled to work with Revinix as we continue to build our program and compete among the world's best."

Biathlon Canada conducted due diligence with its Integrated Support Team (IST) to review the Revinix technology and collaborated with the company to develop an appropriate protocol tailored to the needs of its biathletes. The partnership reflects a shared commitment to supporting athletes through the demands of training, competition and international travel.

"Becoming the Official Recovery Partner of Biathlon Canada through 2030 is a major milestone for Revinix. Biathlon has a long, demanding season with a lot of travel, so recovery has to be simple and reliable. Our boots combine air compression and heat in one session, and having Biathlon Canada's Integrated Support Team review our technology and build a protocol around their athletes is a powerful validation of what we're building. We're proud to support Biathlon Canada's athletes throughout the next four years, and to play a role in helping them recover, prepare, and perform at their best as they compete on the world stage," said Kirill Kim, founder and chief executive officer of Revinix.
