Introducing your Nature Festival event

Marni ngadlu tampinhi ngadlu Kurna yartangka inparrinhi.
We acknowledge that we meet on the land of the Kurna People.

Welcome to [your event]. Our event is part of the Nature Festival, a growing movement of over two hundred partners dedicated to celebrating South Australia's unique love of nature and reminding us of the wellbeing that a deeper connection to nature can offer.

This is year 7 of the Nature Festival and it is running during School Holidays until the 11th of October. The festival features diverse events for all ages: arts, music, Aboriginal Culture, food, wine, family, and adventure, and events range right across South Australia.

We know we don't care about things that we're not connected to. The Nature Festival aims to meet people where they are, connecting through our diverse interests to deepen our relationship with nature.

Our theme this year is Seed. It is a theme that holds cycles, beginnings, and the quiet intensity of possibility. Seed acknowledges that change is slow and sometimes unseen at first, shaped through patience, attention, and care. Seed speaks to this moment of standing on the edge, of starting. It encapsulates the time when something has not yet taken form, but the conditions for transformation are present.

Closing your Nature Festival event

Thanks again for coming along to our event. If you like our event, there are still [x days] left in the festival you might also enjoy [recommend a few upcoming events].

If you don't have an Elder doing a welcome, you should start by acknowledging country. If you are meeting on Kurna land, you can even use Kurna language to do so. We thank our inaugural cultural ambassador Jack Buckskin for giving us these words.

Feel free to use as much or as little of this as you like and use your own words to describe the festival and the theme.

Close by thanking everyone and recommending some other events they might enjoy.
