The Black Jay

In winter when the snow is down
The Jays kick up a din
Fighting over scraps of food
That should be in the bin.

They scavenge around each work site
For what ever can be found.
They'll even take your tucker box
If you leave it on the ground.

But in summer time, the Black Jays,
Tasmania's Currawong,
Go back up in the mountains
To sing their summer song.

Will they remember the Newton Camp,
White Spur, or Henty Dam.
Where in the cold of winter time
They fed on bread and jam.
