

Accommodations worth asking for by name

Four to name out loud, written the way a school team can act on.

1

A named place to go, and permission to use it.

Not sent there as a consequence. Ask for the room, for how your child asks, and for who says yes. Written down, it happens.

2

The schedule in writing, where your child can see it.

Their own copy, and a warning before it changes. Ask for the warning in advance rather than the change announced.

3

Fewer items, and a longer clock.

The same work, less of it, and more minutes for it. Ask for the number of problems, not only for the extra time.

4

One adult who owns the plan.

A name on the page and a way to reach them. Support that belongs to everybody belongs to nobody.
