EMPOWERING PEOPLE,
CREATING IMPACT

A group of people, mostly women, are standing in a lush green field. Some are holding colorful umbrellas, suggesting it might be raining or about to rain. The background is filled with tall palm trees under a grey, overcast sky. The overall scene conveys a sense of community and outdoor activity in a rural or agricultural setting.

Managing for Sustainable Impact

Make a difference in complex environments

In-Person | Bangkok | 1-4 December 2026

Why our course

During the last decade, managing for sustainable impact has gained much traction in international cooperation. Still, many organizations struggle to plan and achieve sustainable change. A focus on sustainable development results has consequences for the entire organization: on planning, on how information is generated and used for decision making, accountability, and communication. Learning how to plan for sustainable impact with the help of the Theory of Change, good results frameworks and monitoring systems is the first crucial step for your organization.

Key topics

- Designing impactful programmes: Theory of Change, Outcome Mapping and Results-Chains and Stakeholder Analysis
- SMART Indicators: Selecting the right strategies and SMART indicators
- Results-Based Monitoring System: Designing and planning for evaluations
- Strategic Planning: Evaluation and operational planning
