Result Based Management

Managing the process to achieve development results

Dhaka, Bangladesh
24 - 26 November 2026

Why our course

Managing activities is not the same as achieving results. Development professionals are increasingly expected to demonstrate meaningful change, use evidence to guide decisions and remain accountable to stakeholders.

This practical course will help you move beyond activity-based management towards a results-oriented approach. Through hands-on exercises, real-world examples and peer learning, you will strengthen your ability to plan, monitor, assess and communicate results throughout the project and programme cycle.

Key topics

- Introduction to Results-Based Management (RBM), its principles, importance and application in development projects and programmes. Understanding the RBM cycle and integrating results-based approaches into project and programme planning, implementation, monitoring and evaluation.
- Identifying development problems, needs and priorities through situation, stakeholder and root-cause analysis. Developing results chains linking inputs, activities, outputs, outcomes, intended impacts and formulating SMART indicators for monitoring,
- Integrating gender and inclusion considerations into results planning, monitoring and data disaggregation.
- Tracking implementation progress and assessing intended and unintended changes at output and outcome levels. Strengthening results-based reporting to communicate achievements, challenges, lessons learned and evidence of change.
- Strengthening accountability, organisational learning and stakeholder engagement for effective results delivery.

By the end of this course, you will:

- Understand Results-Based Management: Explore RBM principles, the management cycle and the shift from activity-based to results-oriented management.
- Analyse Problems and Pathways of Change: Apply situation analysis, results chains and Theory of Change to identify priorities, expected changes, assumptions and risks.
- Strengthen Stakeholder Engagement & Risk Management: Apply stakeholder analysis, risk mapping, and assumption assessment to improve participation, anticipate challenges, and strengthen programme implementation.
- Develop Results Frameworks, indicators Plan and Budget for Results: Formulate results statements, SMART indicators, baselines, targets and means of verification. Align activities, work plans, resources and budgets with expected results.
- Strengthen Learning and Adaptive Management: Use monitoring and evaluation findings to improve decisions, accountability and project and programme performance.
