

CAPABILITY UPLIFT

Curiosity.

In a world of instant answers, the rarest skill isn't knowing. It's wondering.

STRUCTURE

We work with you to understand your needs to tailor this session for your team - from a 45-minute Lunch & Learn to a full 2-hour workshop. We're adept at online, in-person, or hybrid.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

- Recognise the barriers that block innovative thinking and stall projects.
- Understand the tangible link between curiosity, imagination, creativity, and innovation.
- Discover your unique curiosity superpower to improve team collaboration and project outcomes.

WHY

In an era where AI can deliver instant answers, the real competitive advantage for businesses isn't finding the answer, it's asking the right question. Great innovation doesn't live at the end of a prompt; it lives in the gaps nobody thought to explore.

WHAT

Redvespa's curiosity session draws on decades at the intersection of people, process, and technology to treat curiosity as a pragmatic tool rather than an abstract skill. Participants identify their personal Curiosity Type and learn how these styles sharpen team dynamics and improve outcomes across a project. The session also names the Curiosity Killers - the psychological, social, and environmental barriers that stall progress, and gives participants strategies for working past them. Built on storytelling rather than theory, the session stays engaging and grounded. Participants leave with techniques not found in a textbook and a sharper instinct for spotting possibilities others miss.

WHO

Matt Duce is Redvespa's Head of Consulting and the architect of our Curiosity session. A BA for 20+ years, Matt leads with what he calls "Redvespa magic": creative, unconventional thinking built on genuine relationships and the challenging questions that come from them.

Note: other members of our team may deliver this, guided by Matt.
