Muckleshoot Invests in the Protection of Native Children

MUCKLESHOOT — On Feb 17, the Muckleshoot Tribal Council gathered in chambers to present a 100,000-dollar donation to the National Indian Child Welfare Association. While the moment was marked with a ceremonial check, the meaning behind it reaches far beyond a single day.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH ḵaswələx^w tsiit stəṭadaɣčəl (Our Women Are Strong)

The month of March is Women's History Month. We celebrate all the women in our lives and our thankful for all the Muckleshoot women who have fought for our Tribal Sovereignty. The black and white photo is from 1950. It shows women cooking salmon on the Muckleshoot reservation.

Muckleshoot Opens Washington Legislative Session with Prayer and Presentation of Colors

OLYMPIA — On March 9, 2026 the Washington State House of Representatives opened the legislative session with a moment of prayer and recognition led by representatives of the Muckleshoot Indian Tribe, bringing Muckleshoot leadership and veteran service into the state Capitol.

At the invitation of Speaker Pro Tempore Chris Stearns, Muckleshoot Leaders and veterans traveled to Olympia where Bishop and Minister Dennis Anderson Sr. offered the opening prayer and blessing on the House floor. Anderson serves with the 1910 Shaker Church and the Muckleshoot Shaker Church.

Following the prayer, the bəqəlšut łšupčadəd, (Muckleshoot Warriors) Color Guard, presented the colors inside the chamber, including the Muckleshoot Indian Tribal flag. The ceremony marked a rare moment where state lawmakers and visitors in the gallery witnessed Muckleshoot culture and service recognized as part of the official opening proceedings of the House.

They were welcomed by lawmakers and introduced to members of both the Republican and Democratic caucuses by Rep. Chris Stearns of District 47 and Rep. Debra Lekanoff of District 40. The gathering provided an opportunity for Muckleshoot leadership to connect with legislators and share about the Tribe's culture, values, and ongoing government-to-government relationship with the state of Washington.

Intergovernmental Affairs Coordinator, Sean Daniels was alongside Councilmember Donny Stevenson who spoke on behalf of the Tribe during the visit.

"It is always such a privilege to represent the Muckleshoot Indian Tribe in Washington's state capitol, Olympia, and really fills my heart to watch as our people carry out this halł syayus (good work) and shine in showing who we — as Muckleshoot — really are.

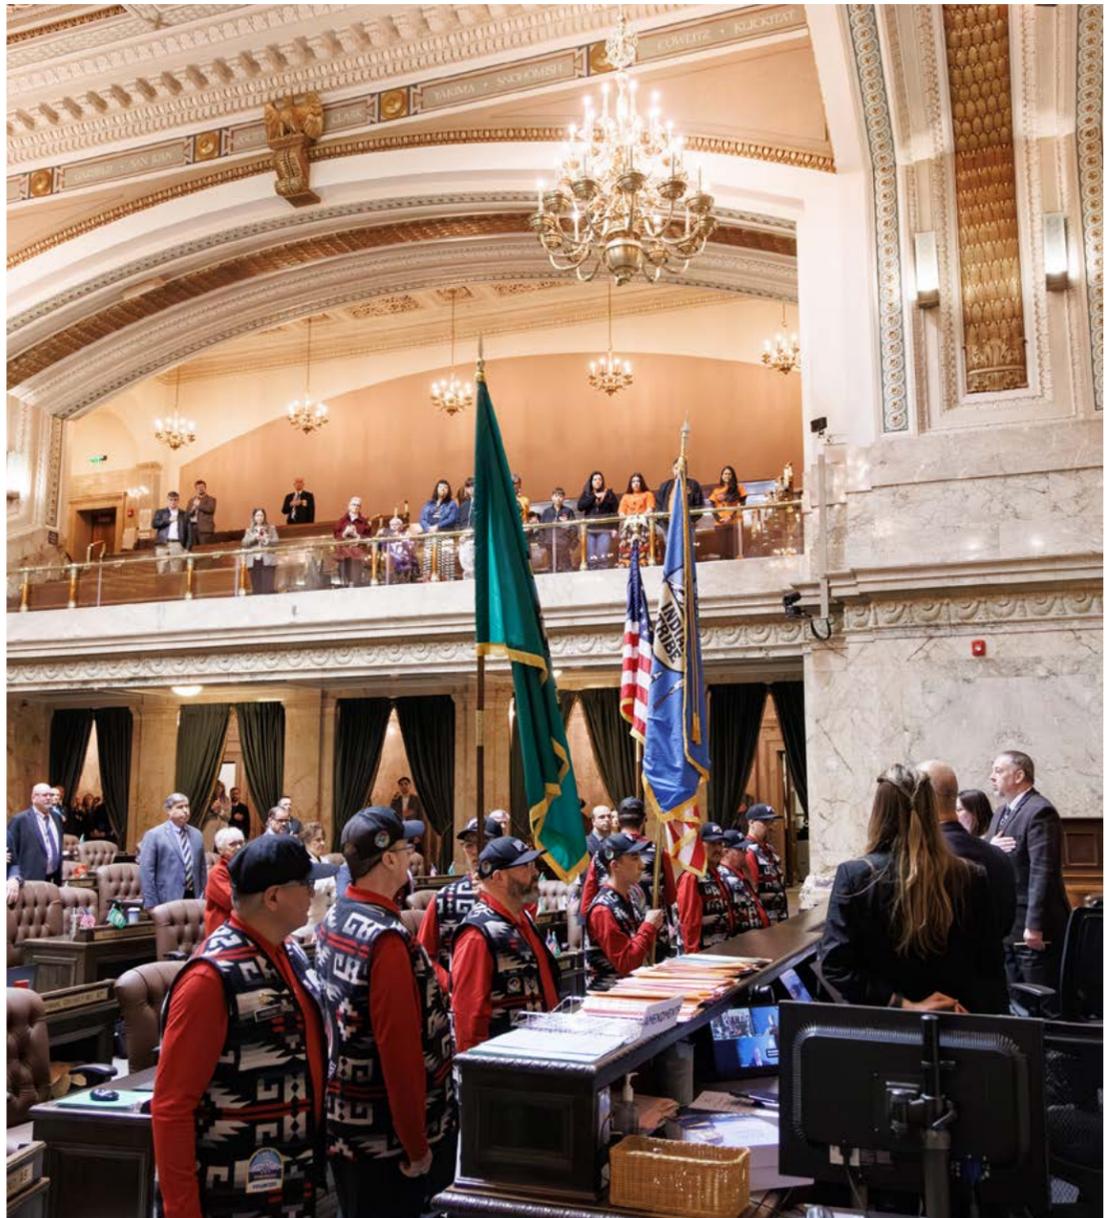

The Washington State Capitol and House of Representatives got to witness this in its truest form today by hosting one of our spiritual leaders, Bishop and Minister Dennis Anderson Sr. for an opening prayer and blessing and the bəqəlšut łšupčadəd (Muckleshoot Warriors) Color Guard for presentation the colors including a Muckleshoot Indian Tribal flag! This diplomatic...

...exchange represents such an accurate reflection of Muckleshoot, a prayerful, spiritual Tribal Nation who put the needs of the people first and will sacrifice for one another in the most important ways. I'd specifically like to thank Speaker Chris Stearns for helping to coordinate this government-to-government exchange and both the Washington State Republican and Democratic Caucuses for hosting us and allowing me a few moments to share about our people and culture. My hands raised in gratitude to all involved and I look forward to continued diplomacy and collaboration in serving our collective peoples."

— Tribal Council Member
Donny Stevenson

Members of the Muckleshoot Warriors Color Guard who participated in the ceremony included Rob Lewis, James Zaja, Jon Herda, Steve Faris, Floyd Hubbard, Randy Leno, Nikolaas Herda, Noah Humes, and Tyler Herda.

The visit to Olympia represented more than a ceremonial moment. It was an opportunity to bring the Tribe's spiritual traditions, veteran service, and cultural identity into the state's legislative chamber while continuing to strengthen relationships between the Tribe and state leaders.

... For generations, Native children were removed from their homes through boarding schools, adoption systems, and policies designed to separate them from their identity, language, and culture. The impacts of those actions are still felt in our communities today. Protecting Native children is not simply a social issue. It is a sovereignty issue. It is about the survival and strength of our Nations.

The National Indian Child Welfare Association works at the national level to defend the rights of Native children and families, support Tribal child welfare programs, and advocate for the full implementation of the Indian Child Welfare Act. Their work ensures that Native children remain connected to their families, their culture, and their Tribal communities. When Native children grow up knowing who they are and where they come from, our Nations remain strong.

Muckleshoot understands that our responsibility does not stop on our own reservation. As Tribal Nations, we are connected. When one Tribe invests in the protection of Native children, we all benefit. This contribution reflects our commitment to intertribal solidarity and to the future of Indigenous families across the country.

This is about more than funding. It is about standing up for Native children at a time when federal protections continue to face scrutiny and when strong Tribal advocacy remains essential. It is about ensuring that Native families have the resources and support they need to keep children safe, connected, and rooted in culture.

At Muckleshoot, we believe our children are sacred. Investing in their protection is an investment in our future.

Seattle Mayor Katie Wilson Visits Muckleshoot Tribe

MUCKLESHOOT — On Feb. 27 Muckleshoot Tribal Council welcomed Seattle Mayor Katie Wilson, they shared history of the Tribe and talked about the importance of Native American voter outreach activities and engagement across Indian country.

During the visit, Councilmembers John Daniels Jr., Donny Stevenson, Jessica Garcia-Jones, Anita Mitchell, and Louie Ungaro honored Mayor Wilson with a blanket, recognizing the importance of relationship and respect in our government-to-government work.

Indigenous Peoples' Community Day at The Seattle Aquarium

By Shayna Brown

On March 8, visitors experienced a rich blend of cultural sharing and environmental learning. As Seattle's Host Tribe, the Muckleshoot Indian Tribe co-hosted a reflection of their partnership with the Seattle Aquarium. This fun-filled event offered insights into their traditions, history, and ongoing stewardship of local ecosystems, emphasizing the importance of collaborative conservation efforts rooted in both science and Indigenous knowledge to ensure healthy waters for generations to come.

The event featured a variety of interactive and family friendly experiences, including storytelling, career panel, cultural panel, cultural demonstrations, a scavenger hunt and a Fish War Documentary screening, honoring the Tribe's heritage and connection to the Salish Sea. The Muckleshoot Indian Tribe provided free admission, along with additional reduced cost access for attendees. This support removed financial barriers and ensured that families, elders, and community members could fully participate in the day's programming. The result was a warm, intergenerational gathering that reflected the Tribe's commitment to inclusion and shared learning.

Muckleshoot Valentines Winter POWWOW

By Shayna Brown

The Muckleshoot community filled the floor with love, laughter, and good medicine on Feb. 7 at this year's Valentine's Winter Powwow. From the first drumbeat to the last round dance, the day carried that unmistakable mix of joy, tradition, and unconditional love that makes this gathering so special. One of the highlights of the evening was the Sweetheart Team Dance Special, where couples, besties and anyone in between came to win or came to have fun, and all of them brought big smiles and even bigger moves. The Powwow held at the Muckleshoot Community Center offered a place to celebrate love in all its forms: romantic, platonic, cultural, and community love. It was a beautiful day to dance, honor, and share space. Until next year, may your steps stay light and your heart stay content.

The Muckleshoot Tribal School Kings attends the WIAA Tournament

The Muckleshoot Tribal School King Boys basketball team made the trip to Spokane for the WIAA tournament to represent our community.

The Kings played Liberty Christian with a final score of 71-38. Though they didn't take home the win, reaching state is a huge accomplishment and we are proud of the team.

Introducing:

KCSO Deputy Matveyenko

MPO-Housing Deputy
Muckleshoot Police Dept.

About Me

Їæ« (hello), my name is Alex Matveyenko, and I'm grateful for the opportunity to be part of the Muckleshoot community.

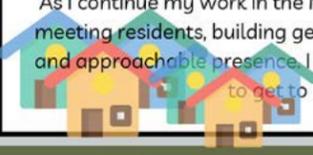

I immigrated to the United States from Russia with my parents when I was 10 years old, and Washington has been home to me for many years. I served six years in the U.S. Army and have spent the past 12 years with the King County Sheriff's Office, experiences that have shaped my appreciation for service, teamwork, and community. That said, who I am outside of work is just as important to me.

Fun Facts

My wife and I have three children, ages 11, 9, and 7, and much of my free time is spent with them. I enjoy boating, snowboarding, and coaching my son's basketball team, which has been especially rewarding and a great way for me to stay connected and involved.

As I continue my work in the Muckleshoot community, I look forward to meeting residents, building genuine relationships, and being a respectful and approachable presence. I appreciate the opportunity to be here and to get to know the community.

ATTENTION TRIBAL MEMBERS: Have You Used the Member Services Portal?

The Muckleshoot Indian Tribe's Member Services Portal is an online portal created for Tribal members. On the dashboard, you can find community updates and notices, upcoming events, and popular resource links.

Tribal services and programs are available to browse through the navigation menu on the left side of the portal, including education programs, scholarships, student support, health and wellness services, housing and community development, cultural programs, social services, and more.

The navigation menu also includes the community calendar, notices and closures, digital articles from the Muckleshoot Messenger, and election information.

The portal is intended to save you time and keep everything in one place. If you have not visited the portal recently, take a few minutes to explore and familiarize yourself with it.

There is a lot of information that moves quickly, so we encourage you to bookmark and check the dashboard regularly to avoid missing out on things and stay up-to-date with reliable information.

The image shows a screenshot of the Muckleshoot Indian Tribe Member Services Portal. The dashboard includes sections for '2026 TRIBAL COUNCIL ELECTION', 'NOTICES & CLOSURES' (Dental Office Closure - January 14, 8 AM - 10 AM), 'POPULAR LINKS' (Tribal License Plate Reimbursement, Muckleshoot Housing Authority Online Payments, Tribal Transit), and 'UPCOMING EVENTS' (Weaving Wednesday at Culture Building, Positive Indian Parenting, Miss Indian World Meets Families and Students During Muckleshoot Visit). An 'Event Calendar' is also visible, showing events for January 2026. A QR code is overlaid on the bottom left of the dashboard screenshot.
