About the Conference

PEACE Forward is a free two-day conference bringing together educators, artists, cultural partners, policymakers, and community leaders to explore how the arts fuel educational and social transformation. Grounded in the success of PAC's (Patchogue Arts Council) PEACE (Partners in Education, Arts, & Community Empowerment) Project, this gathering highlights powerful collaborations that advance equity, deepen student engagement, and strengthen community connections. The program is designed to share practical classroom strategies alongside the policies and partnerships that sustain long-term impact.

This year's conference features a keynote address by internationally acclaimed artist and activist Edel Rodríguez, whose bold visual work—rooted in themes of migration, identity, and social justice—has shaped global conversations across art, media, and public life. His keynote will inspire attendees to consider how creative expression can confront urgent issues, elevate student voice, and spark meaningful change.

Empowering educators and leaders to harness the arts for equity, engagement, and student success.

TWO-DAY FOCUS

DAY 1

Practice focuses on classrooms, collaboration, and proven creative strategies that drive student success.

DAY 2

Policy connects those outcomes to broader systems—funding, sustainability, advocacy, and long-term impact.

Across both days, attendees will discover innovative models, hear inspiring stories, engage with regional and national leaders, and join a growing movement committed to making the arts essential to education and community life.
