

Letter to Annamie Paul

This episode features an in-depth conversation with Annamie Paul, former leader of the Green Party of Canada (2020-2021). Write her a long, juicy letter that engages her on an issue about which both of you are passionate. In addition to referencing specific experiences she shared on the podcast episode, you might also consider referencing an article or media comments she made, or a certain course of action she took in her political career. You may explain what they represent to you and why. Consider addressing, as well, any significant differences between you—generational, political, experiential—including any judgments you might have, and any questions. Don't hold back, but do make sure you know what you're talking about and who you're talking to. In other words, pay her the respect of conducting the necessary background research, and don't be afraid to reference what you know in your letter.
