About the Samara Centre for Democracy

Founded in 2007, the Samara Centre for Democracy produces ground-breaking research, dynamic events and educational resources that advance a vibrant culture of civic engagement across Canada. Our mission is to realize a resilient democracy with responsive institutions, shaped by an engaged public.

For over a decade the Samara Centre has shaped critical conversation about the health of Canada's democracy. Key pieces of work include the 2014 national bestseller Tragedy in the Commons, the award winning Humans of the House podcast and the innovative SAMbot project which measures online abuse during Canadian elections. Our work has received national media coverage and is routinely drawn on by public leaders, educators, policy makers, academics and active citizens.

We want to make it easier for people to talk about and participate in politics. And we invite you to join us.

About In Defence of Democracy

The In Defence of Democracy event convenes a diverse audience that extends across sectors, disciplines, professions and generations to consider a pressing question of our era: how do we inspire renewed civic purpose in Canada? The program is highly regarded for its dynamism and has received praise from Governor General Mary Simon. In Defence of Democracy has also received national media attention with coverage on CTV's The Social and CBC Radio.

Previous In Defence of Democracy speakers include investigative journalist Connie Walker, internationally recognized journalist Lisa LaFlamme, author Anand Giridharadas and former Calgary mayor Naheed Nenshi.

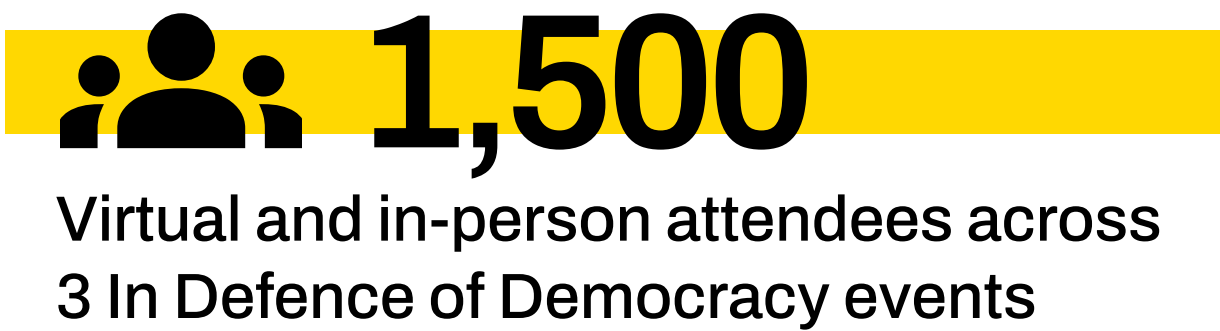

In Defence of Democracy programs are recorded and air on CBC Radio's IDEAS.
