A savings account is meant for individuals to save money. It is the most common type for students and salaried individuals. A current account is generally used by businesses and has higher transaction limits but no interest and may have minimum balance requirements.

I don't have a bank account, can I use my parent's account?

No, it's strongly recommended to provide a bank account in your own name. The education loan is sanctioned in the student's name, and banks typically disburse the loan amount to the student's account.
