The Power of Preaching

with Bishop Craig Satterlee

Preaching is vital for pastors today because it speaks truth to power, confronts systems of injustice, and offers a vision of God's justice and mercy in a world fractured by division. In a culture saturated with polarization, consumerism, and misinformation, prophetic preaching helps congregations discern God's call to live out the gospel in ways that challenge complacency and inspire transformation. It doesn't merely critique—it also imagines a more faithful future, inviting communities to embody hope, reconciliation, and radical love in tangible ways that witness to the Kingdom of God breaking into the present.

Presenter

Craig Satterlee is the author or co-author of 10 books and numerous articles in both scholarly and ecclesiastical journals. Bishop Satterlee's scholarly interests include the intersection of preaching and areas of congregational life and mission, including liturgy, spirituality, evangelism, stewardship, mission, and leadership. He also studies patristic preaching, most notably that of Ambrose of Milan, and the worship of the early church.

As a scholar, Bishop Satterlee has been described as belonging "to the relatively small group of working homiletics whose work can justifiably be said to have changed the agenda of the discipline." His books are "superb examples of practical theology, remaining fully theological while engaging on-the-ground realities in the life of the church."

Satterlee is past president of the North American Academy of Liturgy, and a member of Societas Liturgica, Societas Homiletica, and the Academy of Homiletics. As a person who is legally blind, Bishop Satterlee has a passion for ministry with persons with disabilities and a unique perspective on the Christian faith, church, and world.
