Simple Agreement for Future Equity ("SAFE") Agreements

As detailed above, the Company holds a number of investments in early-stage companies through Simple Agreements for Future Equity ("SAFEs"). These are financial instruments that provide the Company with the right to obtain equity in the issuing entity upon a future financing event, liquidity event, or other specified trigger. SAFEs do not provide a fixed return and do not carry interest, maturity dates, or voting rights.

In accordance with IFRS 9, the Company initially recorded these SAFE investments at cost, which approximates fair value.

Risk Disclosures

The Company is exposed to a number of risks arising from its investment in SAFEs, including:

- Non-conversion risk: There is no guarantee that a conversion event will occur. In the absence of such an event (e.g., a qualifying financing or liquidity event), the Company may never receive equity in the investee and may lose its entire investment.
- Liquidity risk: SAFEs are not traded in active markets and are generally illiquid. The Company may not be able to sell these instruments prior to conversion or realization of an exit event, limiting its ability to generate near-term cash flows from these investments.
- Valuation uncertainty: Due to the early-stage nature of the investee entities and the conditional terms of conversion, there is significant estimation uncertainty in determining the fair value of SAFEs. The assumptions used in valuation may not reflect actual future outcomes.
- Credit risk: While SAFEs are not debt instruments in legal form, the Company is exposed to credit risk in the event the issuer fails or ceases operations before a conversion or liquidity event takes place.

Fair Value Measurement

The Company has designated its investments in SAFEs at fair value through profit or loss (FVTPL) in accordance with IFRS 9 – Financial Instruments. Fair value is determined at each reporting period using valuation techniques that are appropriate in the circumstances and for which sufficient data are available.

As SAFEs are not traded on active markets, their fair values are classified as Level 3 within the fair value hierarchy defined in IFRS 13 – Fair Value Measurement.

The Company uses the recent transaction method to estimate the fair value of its SAFE investments. When applicable, the price of a recent financing round may be used as a basis for valuation, adjusted for changes in the business or market conditions. Valuation inputs include management estimates, recent financing data, terms of the SAFE agreement (such as discount rate, valuation cap), and market-based assumptions such as volatility and discount rates.

Fair Value Gains and Losses

Changes in the fair value of SAFE investments are recognized in the statement of profit or loss in the period in which they arise.

For the period ended June 30, 2025, the Company recognized the following in relation to its SAFE investments:

Fair value gains: $Nil (2024 - $108,864)

Fair value losses: $825,228 (2024 - $Nil)

- Share-based compensation decreased by $383,076 in 2025 from 2024 due to more option grants to directors, officers, employees and consultants of the Company in the prior period compared to the current period.
- In the current period, the Company recorded an unrealized loss on fair value of investments of $895,828 compared to an unrealized gain of $32,051 in the prior period.

The unrealized loss in the current period was due primarily to a decrease in the fair value of the Company's investment in Melibio Inc. and an unfavourable move in the USD to CAD foreign exchange rate which resulted in a fair value decrease of $128,415.

- The fair value of the Company's investment in MeliBio Inc. as at June 30, 2025 was $Nil (December 31, 2024 - $767,413). The Company has historically relied on the equity markets to fund its activities and is open to new sources of financing to manage its expenditures in the interest of sustaining long-term viability. The Company's capital management objectives, policies and processes have not changed over the years presented.

Management reviews its capital management approach on an ongoing basis and believes that this approach, given the relative size of the Company, is reasonable. The Company is not subject to any externally imposed capital requirements.

III) Risk Management

The Company's risk exposures and the impact on the Company's financial instruments are summarized below.

a) Credit Risk

Credit risk is the risk of financial loss to the Company if a customer or counter party to a financial instrument fails to meet its contractual obligations and arises principally from the Company's cash and loan receivable. The Company's credit exposure is limited to the carrying amount of its financial assets.

Cult Food Science Corp.

Management's Discussion and Analysis

For the six months ended June 30, 2025 and 2024

The Company's cash is held with a high-credit-rated financial institution and as such, the Company does not believe there to be a significant credit risk in respect to cash.

b) Market Risk

Market risk is the risk that the fair value of future cash flows of a financial instrument will fluctuate because of changes in market prices. Market prices are comprised of four types of risk: foreign currency risk, interest rate risk, commodity price risk and other price risk.

(i) Foreign currency risk

Foreign currency risk is the risk that a variation in exchange rates between the Canadian dollar and a foreign currency will affect the Company's operations and financial results. The functional currency of the Company is the Canadian dollar.

The Company holds investments in US dollar, as such, it is subject to fluctuations in the exchange rates for the Canadian dollar and US dollar. Based upon the Company's financial instruments at June 30, 2025, a 2% increase or decrease in the US dollar would result in an increase/decrease to profit or loss of approximately $48,000.

The majority of the operations of the Company's 90% owned subsidiary, Further Foods Inc., are carried out in the United States of America. As at June 30, 2025, the Company had USD cash of USD$112, inventories of USD$Nil, accounts payable and accrued liabilities of USD$102,233 and note payable of USD$344,356. These factors expose the Company to foreign currency exchange rate risk, which could have a material adverse effect on the ultimate profitability of the Company. A 10% change in the exchange rate would change other comprehensive income by approximately $42,000 (2024 - $Nil).

The Company currently does not plan to enter into foreign currency future contracts to mitigate this risk.

(ii) Interest rate risk

Interest rate risk is the risk that future cash flows will fluctuate as a result of changes in market interest rates. Its interest rate risk is limited to potential decreases on the interest rate offered for cash held with chartered Canadian financial institutions. The Company considers the risk to be immaterial.

(iii) Commodity price risk

Commodity risk is the exposure to fluctuations in the market price of commodities. The Company does not have any commodity exposure.

(iv) Other price risk

Other price risk is the uncertainty associated with the valuation of assets arising from changes in equity markets. The Company is required to fair value its equity investments at the end of each reporting period. This process could result in significant write-downs of the Company's investments over one or more reporting periods, particularly during periods of overall market instability, which would have a significant unfavourable effect on the Company's financial position.

c) Liquidity Risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that the Company will not be able to meet its financial obligations as they come due or can only do so at excessive cost. The key success in managing liquidity is the degree of certainty in the cash flow projections. If future cash flows are fairly uncertain, the liquidity risk increases.

The Company's policy is to ensure that it will have sufficient cash to meet its liabilities when they become due, under both normal and stressed conditions, without incurring unacceptable losses or risking damage to the Company's reputation. The following table sets out the contractual maturities (representing undiscounted contractual cash flows) of financial liabilities:

	Up to 3 months	3 to 12 months	1 to 2 years	Over 2 years	Total
Accounts payable and other liabilities:	$	$	$	$	$
June 30, 2025	1,128,482	92,090	122,787	215,922	1,559,281
December 31, 2024	347,447	472,126	129,501	238,611	1,187,685

On June 19, 2025, the Convertible Debentures (Note 6) matured. The principal and accrued interest have not been repaid and remain outstanding. Accordingly, the debentures are in default. The Company is in discussions with the debenture holders regarding potential settlement alternatives, which may include repayment, extension, refinancing, or conversion into equity. No agreement has been reached as of the date these financial statements were authorized for issue. The Company is exposed to liquidity risk on the Convertible Debenture in default.

During the year ended December 31, 2023, a claim was commenced against the Company by Cell AG Tech Inc. ("Cell AG"). The claim was brought against the Company seeking specific performance of a share purchase agreement Cell AG alleges it entered into with the Company, including seeking an order that the Company pay Cell AG the purchase price and additional consideration as defined in the share purchase agreement, as well as the consulting fees, professional fees and grant funding as contemplated in the share purchase agreement and letter of intent. The Company believes the claim is meritless and intends to defend itself. Forwarding Looking Information

This Management's Discussion and Analysis may contain forward-looking statements, including statements regarding the business and anticipated financial performance of the Company, which involve risks and uncertainties. These risks and uncertainties may cause the Company's actual results to differ materially from those contemplated by the forward-looking statements. Readers are encouraged to consider the other risks and uncertainties discussed in and additional information contained in the Company's required consolidated financial statements and filings filed on SEDAR at www.sedarplus.ca.

Risk And Uncertainties

Risk is inherent in all business activities and cannot be entirely eliminated. Our goal is to enable the Company's business processes and opportunities by ensuring that the risks arising from our business activities, the markets and political environments in which we operate is mitigated. The risks and uncertainties described in this section are considered by management to be the most important in the context of the Company's business. The risks and uncertainties described are not inclusive of all the risks and uncertainties the Company may be subject to and other risks may apply.

Early Stage

The Company's present business is at an early stage. As such, the Company is subject to many risks including under-capitalization, cash shortages, and limitations with respect to personnel, financial and other resources and the lack of revenue. There is no assurance that the Company will be successful in achieving a return on shareholders' investment and the likelihood of success must be considered in light of its early stage of operations. The Company currently has no source of revenue and expects to obtain financing in the future primarily through further equity and/or debt financing. While it has been successful in obtaining financing in the past, there is no guarantee that the Company will be successful now, or in the future. Failure to raise additional financing on a timely basis could cause the Company to eventually suspend its operations.

Economic Conditions

Current and future unfavourable economic conditions could negatively impact the Company's financial viability. Unfavourable economic conditions could also increase the Company's financing costs, decrease net income or increase net loss, limit access to capital markets and negatively impact any of the availability of credit facilities to the Company.

No Profits to Date

The Company has not made profits since its incorporation and it may not be profitable for the foreseeable future. Its future profitability will, in particular, depend upon the timing of the realization or disposition of the Company's investments. Because of the limited operating history and the uncertainties surrounding the Company's investments, management does not believe that the operating results to date should be regarded as indicators for the Company's future performance.

Going Concern Assumption

Cult Food Science Corp.

Management's Discussion and Analysis

For the six months ended June 30, 2025 and 2024

The consolidated financial statements of the Company have been prepared in accordance with IFRS on a going concern basis, which presumes that the Company will be able to realize its assets and discharge its liabilities in the normal course of business for the foreseeable future. The Company's continuation as a "going concern" is uncertain and is dependent upon, amongst other things, attaining a satisfactory revenue level, the support of its customers, its ability to continue profitable operations, the generation of cash from operations, and its ability to obtain financing arrangements and capital in the future. These material uncertainties represent risks to the Company's ability to continue as a going concern and realize its assets and pay its liabilities as they become due. If the "going concern" assumption was not appropriate for the consolidated financial statements, then adjustments would be necessary to the carrying values of assets and liabilities, the reported expenses and the balance sheet classifications used. Such adjustments could be material.

Additional Requirements for Capital

Substantial additional financing may be required if the Company is to successfully develop its business. No assurances can be given that the Company will be able to raise the additional capital that it may require for its anticipated future development. Any additional equity financing may be dilutive to investors and debt financing, if available, may involve restrictions on financing and operating activities. There is no assurance that additional financing will be available on terms acceptable to the Company, if at all. If the Company is unable to obtain additional financing as needed, it may be required to reduce the scope of its operations or anticipated expansion.

Expenses May Not Align With Revenues

Unexpected events may materially harm the Company's ability to align incurred expenses with recognized revenues. The Company incurs operating expenses based upon anticipated revenue trends. Since a high percentage of these expenses may be relatively fixed, a delay in recognizing revenues from transactions related to these expenses (such a delay may be due to the factors described elsewhere in this risk factor section or it may be due to other factors) could cause significant variations in operating results from quarter to quarter, and such a delay could materially reduce operating income. If these expenses are not subsequently matched by revenues, the Company's business, financial condition, or results of operations could be materially and adversely affected.

Market Acceptance

The growth of the Company's investments in part depends on their ability to develop and market new products and improvements to their existing products that appeal to consumer preferences. The success of an investee company's innovation and product development efforts is affected by its ability to anticipate changes in consumer preferences, the technical capability of its research and development team in developing and testing product prototypes, including complying with applicable governmental regulations, the success of its management and sales and marketing team in introducing and marketing new products and positive acceptance by consumers. Failure to develop, successfully market and sell new products may inhibit an investee company's growth, sales and profitability, which may have a material adverse effect on the Company's investment.

Concentration Risk

The Company's investment portfolio is subject to concentration risk, which arises from exposure to a limited number of investments, sectors, or geographic regions that may cause the portfolio's value to fluctuate in response to events affecting those particular exposures.

During the period ended June 30, 2025 and the year ended December 31, 2024, the Company's holdings in Further Foods Inc., represented a material portion of the total fair value of the Company's investment portfolio. Additionally, a significant portion of the Company's investments is concentrated in the cellular agriculture technology, which may expose the Company to adverse developments in that sector, including regulatory changes, economic downturns, or market volatility.

The Company manages concentration risk by adhering to its investment policies, which include investee and sector diversification guidelines, and by regularly monitoring portfolio exposures. However, no assurance can be given that these measures will fully mitigate the impact of concentration risk on the Company's net asset value or financial performance.

The Company does not use derivative instruments or other financial contracts to hedge against concentration risk.

Global Financial Developments

Stress in the global financial system may adversely affect the Company's finances and operations in ways that may be hard to predict or to defend against. Financial developments seemingly unrelated to the Company or to its industry may adversely affect the Company over the course of time. For example, material increases in any applicable interest rate benchmarks may increase the debt payment costs for any credit facilities. Credit contraction in financial markets may hurt its ability to access credit in the event that the Company identifies an acquisition opportunity or require significant access to credit for other reasons. A reduction in credit, combined with reduced economic activity, may adversely affect business. Any of these events, or any other events caused by turmoil in world financial markets, may have a material adverse effect on the Company business, operating results, and financial condition.

Regulatory Risks

Cult Food Science Corp.

Management's Discussion and Analysis

For the six months ended June 30, 2025 and 2024

The Company's investment portfolio is concentrated in early-stage companies operating within the cellular agriculture technologies, including products intended for both human and non-human consumption. These investments span cultivated meat, precision fermentation-derived proteins, pet food applications, and biomaterials.

Regulatory risk is a key consideration given the evolving oversight frameworks in the jurisdictions where many portfolio companies operate—primarily the United States and Canada. Products intended for human consumption (e.g., cultivated meat and dairy alternatives) are subject to significantly more rigorous and less established regulatory pathways than those intended for non-human consumption (e.g., pet food or industrial biomaterials).

In the United States, human food products are regulated jointly by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). The regulatory process remains emergent, with limited approvals to date and ongoing uncertainty around pre-market review, labeling, and production oversight. In contrast, non-human food products such as cultivated pet food may face less regulatory complexity, though still require compliance with standards administered by the FDA's Center for Veterinary Medicine (CVM).

In Canada, human food products fall under the oversight of Health Canada and the Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA), both of which follow a science-based risk assessment approach for novel foods. At present, there is no formalized regulatory framework specific to cultivated food products, which may lead to prolonged timelines or unanticipated requirements. Products for non-human consumption, such as pet food and biomaterials, may fall under less prescriptive regulatory regimes, although certain categories may still require pre-market notifications or safety assessments depending on intended use and composition.

The Company is exposed to elevated concentration risk due to the regulatory uncertainty surrounding products intended for human consumption, particularly in jurisdictions without established approval processes. A material adverse development—such as increased regulatory scrutiny, unfavorable labeling requirements, or political resistance—could disproportionately impact the portfolio's human food investments.

The Company has diversified exposure across product categories (e.g., food vs. non-food), regulatory regimes, and development stages. Regulatory risk remains a fundamental risk inherent to the Company's investment strategy in cellular agriculture.

Cross-border Economic and Trade Risk

The Company is a Canadian company with a material portion of its investment portfolio allocated to early-stage companies based in the United States. This cross-border exposure presents several macroeconomic and policy-related risks that may affect the performance and valuation of the Company's investments.

Ongoing or future trade tensions between Canada and the United States, or between the U.S. and other major economies, may result in the imposition of tariffs, export controls, or non-tariff barriers that affect the cost structure, market access, or supply chains of portfolio companies. Cellular agriculture technologies—particularly those involving inputs such as growth media, bioreactors, or synthetic biology components—could be impacted by restricted access to critical materials or equipment, whether through direct trade barriers or compliance burdens tied to export classifications.

Differences in regulatory policy and enforcement between Canada and the United States may create inconsistencies in the development and commercialization environment for cellular agriculture. For example, changes in U.S. federal or state-level regulations—such as food labeling requirements, intellectual property protections, or foreign ownership restrictions—may impact the business operations of investee companies and influence investor confidence. Additionally, shifts in U.S. economic or industrial policy may favor domestic producers or disadvantage foreign-backed companies, including those with Canadian capital involvement.

The Company may face tax and withholding risks related to income, capital gains, or distributions received from U.S.-based investments. Changes to U.S. or Canadian tax law, or the interpretation of bilateral tax treaties, could adversely impact returns or create additional compliance costs. Restrictions on the repatriation of capital or changes to cross-border investment rules could further constrain the Company's strategic flexibility.

The Company mitigates these risks through portfolio diversification, ongoing monitoring of economic and regulatory developments, and engagement with legal and tax advisors in both jurisdictions. However, there can be no assurance that such measures will eliminate the potential financial or strategic impacts of cross-border economic, policy, or regulatory disruptions.

Dependence on Third Party Relationships

The Company is highly dependent on a number of third party relationships to conduct its business and implement expansion plans. It cannot be assured that all of these partnerships will turn out to be as advantageous as currently anticipated or that other partnerships would not have proven to be more advantageous. In addition, it is impossible to assure that all associated partners will perform their obligations as agreed.

Management's Discussion and Analysis

Economic Environment

The Company's operations could be affected by general economic context conditions should the unemployment level, interest rates or inflation reach levels that influence consumer trends, and consequently, impact the Company's sales and profitability. As well, general demand cellular agriculture products cannot be predicted and future prospects of such areas might be different from those predicted by the Company's management.

Failure to Grow at the Rate Anticipated

The Company is a start-up company with no history of sales or profitability. If the Company is unable to achieve adequate revenue growth, its ability to become profitable may be adversely affected and the Company may not have adequate resources to execute its business strategy.

Management of Growth

The Company may be subject to growth-related risks including pressure on its internal systems and controls. The Company's ability to manage its growth effectively will require it to continue to implement and improve its operational and financial systems. The inability of the Company to deal with this growth could have a material adverse impact on its business, operations and prospects. While management believes that it will have made the necessary investments in infrastructure to process anticipated volume increases in the short term, the Company may experience growth in the number of its employees and the scope of its operating and financial systems, resulting in increased responsibilities for the Company's personnel, the hiring of additional personnel and, in general, higher levels of operating expenses. In order to manage its current operations and any future growth effectively, the Company will also need to continue to implement and improve its operational, financial and management information systems and to hire, train, motivate and manage its employees. There can be no assurance that the Company will be able to manage such growth effectively, that its management, personnel or systems will be adequate to support the Company's operations or that the Company will be able to achieve the increased levels of revenue commensurate with the increased levels of operating expenses associated with this growth.

Litigation

The Company may become involved in litigation that may materially adversely affect it. From time to time in the ordinary course of the Company business, it may become involved in various legal proceedings. Such matters can be time-consuming, divert management's attention and resources and cause the Company to incur significant expenses. Furthermore, because litigation is inherently unpredictable, the results of any such actions may have a material adverse effect on the Company's business, operating results or financial condition. More specifically, the Company may face claims relating to information that is retrieved from or transmitted over the Internet or through the solution and claims related to the Company's products. In particular, the nature of the Company's business exposes it to claims related to intellectual property rights, rights of privacy, and personal injury torts. Furthermore, there is no assurance that any liability incurred as a result of litigation can be recovered from the Company's insurance policy.

Conflicts of interest

The directors of the Company are required by law to act honestly and in good faith with a view to the best interests of the Company and to disclose any interests, which they may have in any project or opportunity of the Company. If a conflict of interest arises at a meeting of the board of directors, any director in a conflict will disclose his interest and abstain from voting on such matter. Conflicts, if any, will be subject to the procedures and remedies as provided under the OBCA. To the best of the Company's knowledge, and other than disclosed herein, there are no known existing or potential conflicts of interest between the Company and its directors and officers except that certain of the directors and officers may serve as directors and/or officers of other companies, and therefore it is possible that a conflict may arise between their duties to the Company and their duties as a director or officer of such other companies.

Difficulty to Forecast

The Company must rely largely on its own market research to forecast sales as detailed forecasts are not generally obtainable from other sources at this early stage of the cellular agriculture industry. A failure in the demand for its products to materialize as a result of competition, technological change or other factors could have a material adverse effect on the business, results of operations and financial condition of the Company.

Internal Controls

Effective internal controls are necessary for the Company to provide reliable financial reports and to help prevent fraud. Although the Company will undertake a number of procedures and will implement a number of safeguards, in each case, in order to help ensure the reliability of its financial reports, including those imposed on the Company under Canadian securities law, the Company cannot be certain that such measures will ensure that the Company will maintain adequate control over financial processes and reporting. Failure to implement required new or improved controls, or difficulties encountered in their implementation, could harm the Company's results of operations or cause it to fail to meet its reporting obligations. If the Company or its auditors discover a material weakness, the disclosure of that fact, even if quickly remedied, could reduce the market's confidence in the Company's consolidated financial statements and materially adversely affect the trading price of the Company's Shares.
