Cobots across the CPG value chain

Where collaborative robots can support consumer packaged goods production

Eight applications. Concrete tasks.

Food & beverages, personal care and household goods | Numbers match the front-page illustration.

1 Depalletizing & line feeding

Remove incoming cases or containers from pallets and feed them into production. Reduces repetitive unloading and supports a steady supply of materials to the line.

2 Machine tending

Load and unload trays or containers at processing equipment. Helps maintain repeatable handling cycles; interlocks coordinate the robot with the machine.

3 Product & tray loading

Orient and place products or sealed packs into trays, fixtures or primary packaging. Supports consistent presentation and repeatable placement across product formats.

4 Quality inspection

Present products or samples to cameras, scanners or test equipment, then sort rejects. The robot handles and positions items; the inspection system performs the check.

5 Box erecting & feeding

Pick flat corrugated blanks, open and square them, and present the bottom flaps to a sealing device. Feed empty, open boxes to the packing station.

6 Case packing & finishing

Group sealed packs into shipping cases, then transfer cases through sealing and labeling equipment. Combines repetitive product handling with coordinated packaging steps.

7 Finished-goods palletizing

Stack packed cases onto pallets in defined patterns for storage and dispatch. Reduces repeated lifting; forklifts or mobile transport systems move completed pallets.

8 Intralogistics support

Transfer totes or pick products for line replenishment and order preparation. A mobile manipulator combines a cobot arm with a mobile base, vision and integrated controls.
