BIO

London's OK Williams is one of the most respected and versatile selectors to emerge from the UK's contemporary underground scene. As a DJ, she champions a fluid, genre-spanning philosophy, prioritising dance floor narrative, momentum, and pure energy above strict boundary lines.

Williams first built a dedicated following through her monthly residency on London's NTS Radio. The show quickly became an essential hub for music discovery, showcasing her expansive curation and her innate ability to bridge the gaps between UK bass mutations, driving 90s techno and electro, soulful amapiano, and classic house. This multi-dimensional yet cohesive approach established her as a selector who deeply understands the roots and rhythms of club culture.

On the dance floor, her mixing is characterised by sharp intuition, impeccable pacing, and a natural connection with the crowd. Whether building a deep, polyrhythmic groove or steadily escalating the energy into high-tempo breakbeats, her sets are masterclasses in tension, release, and crowd control.

This versatility and infectious energy have made her a highly sought-after international act. Her touring schedule includes appearances in Europe and North America, alongside coveted appearances at festivals like Glastonbury, Horst, and Unsound. She holds a residency at Brooklyn's revered Nowadays and regularly commands long-form sets at world-renowned institutions like Berlin's Panorama Bar/Berghain and London's Fabric.

By focusing on flow, vibe, and musical connection, OK Williams crafts immersive club experiences that keep dance floors locked in and moving from start to finish.
